

LEO FRANK'S THROAT SLASHED BY PRISONER AT THE STATE FARM

of the floor until 8 o'clock and the lights are turned down promptly at 9 o'clock. After that hour no prisoner is allowed to move without permission from a guard. It is said Green was a nurse as he drew his knife across Frank's throat. He struck but once. Frank uttered a cry as he fell back and the lights were turned on and all the other prisoners and the guards sprung forward. Excitement which followed lasted for hours.

Frank was conscious from the start and continued to talk. "I guess they've got me," he is quoted as saying to the doctors who stood over him. He suggested to them how the flow of blood might be stopped.

At 1 o'clock Sunday he was still on the operating table, but gradually feeling weaker. Doctors had not succeeded in stopping the flow of blood, although they had checked it. They admitted his chance for recovery was growing smaller.

At 1:15 o'clock Sunday morning the physicians had completed sewing up the wound in Frank's throat. They had joined the jugular vein and they believed the operation was successful. Frank was taken to the hospital. He was still conscious.

Some animosity had been shown Frank since he arrived at the prison farm, but the prison officials stated Sunday morning they had not thought for an instant that an attack would be made on him.

FRANK TALKS TO DOCTORS
After Frank's wound had been dressed, he turned to the physicians attending him and asked:

"Am I going to die?"
"We don't know," said Dr. G. M. Compton, the prison surgeon. "You are in a serious condition and will have to be quiet."

"I am going to die," replied Frank. "I am not afraid. Nothing stands between me and God. I hope that the man who attacked me will be forgiven."

MRS. FRANK HYSTERICAL
Mrs. Frank happened to be at the state farm, a guest at the home of Superintendent Smith tonight at the time that the attack was made on her husband.

Superintendent Smith himself informed Mrs. Frank of the attack that had been made upon her husband.

"Horrible! Horrible!" shrieked the woman.

Mrs. Frank became hysterical. She soon rallied, however, and was taken to the operating room where doctors were at work on her husband. She maintained remarkable composure, held her husband's hands and conversed with her husband while the doctors were putting the stitches.

At 2:15 o'clock this (Sunday) morning Doctor Compton, the prison surgeon, stated that Frank's chances for recovery are slight.

"There is danger of blood poisoning," said the doctor.

"There is danger of the stitches in the jugular vein slipping either one of which might cause death."

Col. Baylor Will Help Lick Kaiser
Yet, He Declares

Colonel Henry Bedinger Baylor, of San Soule Castle, Bedford Place, Atlanta, is so anxious to fight for the Allies that he has written four letters to the governor of Georgia, one to the governor of Virginia, one to the president of France and one to the president of the United States.

In his letter to President Poincaré Colonel Baylor called attention to a misgiving sent to the president some months ago in that letter Colonel Baylor informed the president that he wanted to discharge the debt the United States owes Lafayette for his aid during the Revolution by himself enlisting under the Union flag.

Colonel Baylor received an answer to this letter from the French secretary of state thanking him for his offer and stating that President Poincaré may call on the Atlanta man for his sword.

In his second letter to President Poincaré, a letter to Governor Stewart of Virginia and a letter to President Wilson declaring he is still an "unreconstructed rebel" and therefore owes no allegiance to the United States and can enlist under the Union banner when he gets ready.

Now Colonel Baylor is awaiting results with interest.

STRIKE AT REMINGTON PLANT SEEMS PROBABLE Machinists Ready to Walk Out Unless Demands Are Met by Monday Noon

(By Associated Press.)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 17.—Unless there are unexpected developments in the industrial situation in Bridgeport in the next 36 hours machinists in the employ of the Remington Arms and Ammunition company, will go on strike Monday noon or soon thereafter.

Announcement that the strike call would be issued for that time was made today by J. J. Keppeler, international vice president of the Machinists' union, after he had made an unsuccessful attempt to place before Major W. T. Penfield, works manager of the company, the demands formulated last night at a meeting of the machinists.

Frank Jennings, one of the machinists' union vice presidents having in charge the handling of New England affairs, said the proposed strike would result out of employment between 20,000 and 30,000 workers in Bridgeport. According to present plans of the union, it was said, the machinists in the Remington plant would be called out first, and if the demands of the union were not granted the men in twenty plants being operated by sub-contractors for the Remington company would be called out.

Vincent De Falco, international organizer of the Hod Carriers union, stated his organization would support the strikers in the event of a strike. He said that it had been approved by the general committee. If the machinists walk out the hod carriers will follow them, the organizer said. Such a move would in turn involve bricklayers working on the new buildings. The drop forgers, engaged in the manufacture of bayonets also were considering what action they would take, it was said.

Y. M. C. A. SUMMER SCHOOL

Work in Physical Department
Reaches Climax—Chiggers
Win in Summer League

The Y. M. C. A. Summer league in the School B. No. 2 group, is over, with these results:

Chiggers	Saturday's Points	Total Pts. (Final)
Chiggers	59	458
Chiggers	53	415
Mosquitoes	26	345
Sandflies	19	405

Captain Bacon Blanton, of the Chiggers, deserves special mention, as having more members of his team present than those of any of the other teams during the whole nine meetings of these formidable teams for competition.

Following are the results of School No. 1, aquatic meet, held Saturday:

Plunge—Julian Meyers, 1st; Kenney Matthews, 2nd; Clyde King, 3rd. Distance, 35 feet.

Running Broad Dive—John Simpson and Clyde King, 1st; Reid Hobson, John Childs, Arch Martin and John Malone tied for 2nd. Distance, 14 feet 6 inches.

Cork Race (blowing a large cork before one for a distance of 45 feet)—Julian Meyers, 1st; John Childs and Hunter Lewis, tied for 2nd and 3rd. Time 23 seconds.

This is the fourth aquatic meet held during the month, and there are four more coming next week. Dates: Club Boys, 19th, 9 p. m. Employed Boys—July 22, 7:30 p. m. Employed Internationals—July 22nd, 8:15 p. m., and the large open meet for men, next Saturday night, beginning at 8:15 p. m.

These monthly aquatic meets in the men's department have been a prominent feature of the work all summer. Many have availed themselves of the opportunity to see the association's large swimming pool in use, and none have gone away disappointed.

Next Saturday night, as on previous similar occasions, the young men offer a hearty invitation to all Atlantians to visit their swimming quarters, and to watch a very interesting program. The events for the meet are: Plunge, 20-yard swim, running broad dive, 40-yard back stroke, 100-yard swim and novelty race. Those with inside information are thinking that Mr. Elrod had better look close to his plunge record of 57 feet 6 inches, if he does not wish to see it beaten; neither would they be surprised to see Messrs. Schelperts and Broadstein's running broad dive record of 18 feet beaten.

The men's aquatic records were as follows: Twenty-yard swim, G. H. Bonnell and S. J. Hartney, 10 seconds; 30-yard breast, W. Matson, 14-1-5 seconds; 30-yard back, G. Reddall, 14 seconds; 40-yard swim, G. H. Bonnell, 24 seconds; 40-yard breast, G. H. Bonnell, 22-1-5 seconds; 40-yard side, S. J. Hartney, 41-2-5 seconds; 60-yard swim, S. J. Anderson, 1 minute 41 seconds; cork race, Mr. Goodman, 25 seconds.

Care of Children Associated Press

BERLIN, June 16.—(Correspondence of Associated Press.)—To give the children of soldiers who have been killed in the war, children born during the war before their fathers' death or born after his death or fatal injury, a chance in the world, the district of London has determined to start bank accounts of ten marks.

For each such child the sum of ten marks will be placed on deposit, with the stipulation that it must not be touched until the beneficiary is twenty years old. At the average rate of interest in Germany, compounded annually, this deposit will about have doubled, size by the time it can be withdrawn.

Prostration, lassitude, sleeplessness, heat, fatigue, and all of the distressing symptoms occasioned by hot weather, are prevalent.

NEXT MEXICAN BATTLE EXPECTED NEAR TORREON

Villa Massing Forces to Meet
Carranza Army Under
Gen. Obregon

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 17.—General Villa is massing his forces to meet the Carranza army under General Obregon at Toluca, according to information received tonight at the Villa headquarters. The battle is expected to take place soon.

State department advisers today continued previous reports that Villa had abandoned Aguas Calientes and Zacatecas, and was withdrawing his forces toward Toluca. The movement has been in progress some time. Villa troops are said to have turned up the railroad as they retreated.

Carranza forces have garrisoned Aguas Calientes and Zacatecas and are preparing to press on toward Toluca, where Villa now is in conference with his officers, planning to meet the attack and also for a campaign in Coahuila and Nuevo Leon.

Villa's northward movement is somewhat mysterious to officials here. The general opinion is that Carranza's forces are rapidly driving Villa into the northeast corner of the republic.

Villa's agents, however, contend the retreat is a strategic move.

General Anacleto, Villa's chief lieutenant, who has been in Washington studying the attitude of the United States toward Mexico, left today for Toluca on a mission for Villa. It is understood he will discuss the military scene with General Maytorena.

Arranza Advises Report
Surrender of Villa Men

LAREDO, Texas, July 17.—Carranza agents received at Nuevo Laredo, reported the surrender of 400 Villa troops at Laredo, near Monterey and the arrival of a large Carranza force at Tampico from Vera Cruz to participate in the campaign against Torreón.

PRIZE COURT PROCEDURE EXPLAINED BY ENGLAND

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, July 17.—The British foreign office tonight issued this statement relative to prize court proceedings involving the Norwegian steamers Kim, Alfred Nobel, Bjornstjerne Bjornsen and the Swedish steamer Fridland:

"There appears to be an impression prevalent both in this country and the United States that the cases of the Kim, the Alfred Nobel, the Bjornstjerne Bjornsen and the Fridland, which at present are being heard by the prize court, involve questions of the validity of international law of the policy of intercepting all German imports, enforced by his majesty's government since March 11, and of the attitude adopted toward such policy by the United States government.

"This impression is incorrect. The four ships in question were detained November last, months before that policy was adopted, and their cargoes are being proceeded against as contraband destined for Germany by way of a neutral port.

W. G. RAOUL ARRIVES IN ATLANTA FOR VISIT

Declares Influence of Wife's Relatives Is Back of Suit for Divorce

After two weeks in the county jail at Millen, William Greene Raoul, defendant in a divorce suit brought against him by his wife, who named Mrs. Meta Fuller Sinclair as co-respondent, arrived in Atlanta Friday for a short visit.

Mr. Raoul gave out his views on love and marriage Saturday, asserting that marriage is based entirely on love and that the marital relationship should not continue under ordinary circumstances, after love has ceased.

He denies the charges made by his wife in her suit against him, and said he offered not to fight the suit and to let her get a divorce, with alimony, on the grounds of desertion, if she would retract these charges.

He says he refused to do so, because of the influence of relatives and that he is going to fight the suit for the purpose of proving the charges false. He says his relations with Mrs. Sinclair were improper, and were only those of a host to a guest.

AMERICANS ARE PRAISED FOR WORK IN SERBIA

Sir Thomas Lipton Gives Doctors and Nurses Credit for Conquering Typhus

LONDON, July 17.—"Miraculous is the work being done by American doctors and nurses in Serbia," said Sir Thomas Lipton today after his return from his second trip to the near east with the Red Cross.

"As usual," continued Sir Thomas, "the Americans excel in organization and in the hospitals, but conduct of the work of sanitation, which is rapidly making typhus a thing of the past must go to the Americans, whose magnificent efforts have made them loved by every Serbian from the king to the lowest peasant, all of whom seem fully to appreciate the efforts of the Red Cross in their behalf."

"When I was in Serbia on my first trip," continued Sir Thomas, "it was unsafe to travel in the country, which was then so badly infested from vermin as to make necessary the use of antiseptic night and morning. But on this trip to such precautions were necessary, thanks to the sanitation reforms enforced by the Americans. The hospitals are now as clean as any to be found in Europe, while hotels and dwellings are beginning to observe sanitary regulations."

RICHMOND, Ga., July 17.—While bathing in E. L. Alston's pond near here this afternoon, Oliver Morton, aged nineteen years, the son of T. L. Morton, was drowned while attempting to save the lives of Miss Katie Bell Stallings, daughter of Warren Stallings, of Richmond, and Annie Floyd Hobbs, of Lumpkin.

The young ladies were being entertained at a house party at T. L. Alston's home. They had gone to the pond, accompanied by Miss Alice Morton. Young Morton was not in bathing, but he heard the cries of the young ladies and went to their rescue. John Oliver Stallings and Mr. Baldwin saved the girls. Morton's body was recovered.

BERLIN, June 26.—Correspondence of the Associated Press.—In order that men who won the coveted Iron Cross in 1870-71, and who in the present war have been decorated with the same medal, may have some means of indicating that they have been doubly honored, the authorities have decreed that they may wear, over the silver oak leaf of the old cross, a silver clasp on which is inscribed "Iron Cross bearing the figures 1914."

CABINET UNANIMOUSLY BACK OF MR. WILSON

President Is Solidly Supported in Next Step in Submarine Policy

(By Associated Press.)
CORNISH, N. H., July 17.—His views on the German situation tonight shaped, President Wilson tonight began preparing for his departure for Washington to take up with Secretary Lansing and other members of his cabinet the next step in the American policy toward submarine warfare.

There were indications that the president does not expect to delay long in notifying Germany of the position of the United States. Members of his cabinet are understood to be unanimously back of him in his determination to assert the rights of Americans to the "freedom of the seas," and therefore only details of the next step remain to be determined upon.

The German situation will be discussed in a general way at Tuesday's cabinet meeting, and a final decision is expected to be reached at the next cabinet meeting on Friday.

The president will leave here prepared to take up several important questions upon reaching Washington. He will select a successor to Mr. Lansing as counselor of the state department, go fully into the Mexican problem, and take up with Mr. Lansing the proposed protest against interference by Great Britain with commerce between the United States and other neutrals.

During his three weeks' vacation Mr. Wilson's health has improved, and he has gained several pounds in weight.

SOCIALISTS IN GERMANY PROTEST RISE IN GRAIN

(By Associated Press.)
BERLIN, (Via London, July 17).—The executive committee of the Social ist party and of the Federation of Social ist Labor unions have united in a protest to the minister of the interior against any rise in the maximum prices of grain and flour. It has been intimated there will be an increase when the federal council adopts new regulations in the conservation and distribution of this year's harvest.

50,000 Women Are Making Munitions Of War for Allies

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, July 17.—The minister of munitions today told a deputation of women that about 50,000 women already were working at various factories in the production of munitions. It was not a question of competition between male and female labor, he said, but of molding men and women to work together to help the country through its worst crisis.

The first thing, continued Mr. Lloyd-George, was to get an adequate supply of machinery and tools, and the government was assuming the control of all machine and tool making establishments in the country. Women who came forward to serve must give their whole time. There must be real national organization for all women who were prepared to take up munition work.

The minister added there must be a sufficient number of men trained to direct and instruct others. As to wages, women would be paid the same piece-rate as men and as establishments would be under government control.

Without women, he declared, victory would tarry, and victory which tarried meant victory whose footprints were footprints of blood.

The minister pointed out that the greatest difficulty now was the shortage of machinery for turning out shells, machine and tool making establishments, he said, would be devoted to producing lathes and machines to enable the country to increase supplies of war material.

Meantime it was necessary to set up a national organization to register names of all women willing to devote their whole time to any task for which they were fitted.

Heat a Menace to Lives of Old Folks

Sickness and Misery Are Caused by Constipation
In Hot Weather

People of advancing years should be very careful of their health during the hot months. One has only to follow the mortality record of elderly people as reported in the papers, to realize that these are the hardest months of the year for them.

It is most important to the maintenance of health and vigor at this time to avoid constipation, with its accompanying headaches and muscular and blood congestion. This can be best accomplished by the timely use of a gentle laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, an ideal remedy that is pleasant to the taste, easy and natural in its action and does not gripe. Its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system.

Elderly people should avoid strong physics, cathartics, purgatives, salts and pills as these afford only temporary relief and are a shock to the entire system.

In every home a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should always be on hand. It is inexpensive and can be obtained in any drug store for only fifty cents. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. Caldwell, 412 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

And Your Tires—

Are They Like These?
Have They Goodyear Extras?

Let Us Find Out

We argue for the utmost in a tire. If others give it they deserve your favor. If they skimp their tires they don't.

Profits are small now, competition is fierce. Tire prices have dropped fast. Only mammoth outputs can cope with present conditions. So these are times to scrutinize your tires.

What Extras Cost

It will cost us $1,000,000 this year to make our All-Weather treads double-thick. Many anti-skids are merely regular treads made rough.

Goodyear Fortified Tires contain five exclusive features employed by no one else. They contain other features which are rare. These extras will cost us on this year's output $1,635,000.

Our latest improvements, just added this year, will cost us $500,000 during 1915. So it means something in these days to build maximum tires.

What Extras Save

One extra combats rim-outs, one blow-outs, one loose treads. One means extra-strong side walls, one extra fabric protection. One makes the tire secure. One involves much added rubber.

Our double-thick All-Weather tread means extra wear and enduring grips.

These things save our users many times their cost to us. They gave Goodyear tires top place—have held them there for years. This year they are adding thousands to our users.

Price Savings

Despite these extras, Goodyear prices have come down and down. This year's reduction will save our users about five million dollars. And that was the third reduction in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

Consider these things. Most of them are hidden features. Tires which lack them look like tires which have them. But there's enormous difference in the average service. The only way to get all these extras is to ask for Goodyear Fortified Tires.

Any dealer will supply you.

Fortified Tires
Rim-Cut—by our No-Rim-Cut feature. Blow-out—by our "Crack-Cut" cure. Loose Treads—by many rubber rivets. Insect-proof—by 18 tread plate wires. Punctures and Skidding—by our double-thick All-Weather tread.

STANDARDIZATION OF COLLEGES

BY C. LEWIS FOWLER, A. M., D. D., President of Cox College.

Few people realize what radical changes are taking place in the educational world today. We are living in the day for the standardization of our educational institutions. Our high schools have certain standards set for them. These standards must be met before the schools can get credit in our best colleges. Hence the struggle of our schools to get on the accredited list. While the Carnegie unit system is subject to criticism, deserved criticism, it has done much to get our southern schools down to real work.

The besting sin of the south educationally has been that we have not taken our educational work seriously. We have been satisfied with two little. Our public schools have been very inadequate and our colleges too low in standard. Many of our colleges have been little less than holy forces. But a new day has come, day when all our colleges must stand up and be counted.

The public schools have made progress. The high schools also have met many of the demands of the new day. Can our colleges do better? My plea is for strong, well equipped, standard colleges, especially for our young women. Our women have not had a chance in the past. Today they demand reparation for our sins of other days.

The nationwide movement for the standardization of our women's colleges is not sporadic, it is the movement of a nation deeply stirred by solemn passion at the sight of wrong. The move is a call to the heroic service of restoration. With heartbeats swept as by an onrushing breeze from the white throne, we listen to life's undertone, the moan of those who demand freedom from many of the ills which have enslaved women in the past. Education is the only way to the emancipation of women. And when I say education I mean real education.

The inadequate college must pass to the cemetery. Our mourning will be real and yet we realize that a new educational day has come. This is no day of triumph but of dedication. To build a few great colleges is our task. Men's hearts, men's lives, men's hopes an dear heart call of all noble women appoint us our task sublime. Here at the hearthstone of conscience we must dedicate our all to the building of a few great colleges, Christian colleges, for the future women of America. The small, poorly equipped, poorly officered and unwieldy colleges will die and should die. The few strong centrally located modern colleges will and should survive.

Then, too, I wish to lay special emphasis upon the importance of religion for our girls' colleges. These are trying times for American women. She must have religion or she will perish in her ever increasing responsibility. Our young women cannot forget Christ. Cox college goes forth to meet the needs of women today, to meet the demands of the new day. We are just now one of the six colleges in all the South which has met all the requirements for the standardization. The time has come when the ambitious girl will not waste her time and money in a college that is not standard. Cox offers a full standard literary course leading to the B. A. degree. We also emphasize as of great importance, full courses in music, art, domestic science, extension and physical education.

Atlanta has become the one great educational center in the entire South. By virtue of the fact of Cox's location here at Atlanta she is destined to become a great All-Southern college for young women. Cox is pledged to the highest and best in education for young women.

FLOOD SITUATION IS LESS SERIOUS IN OHIO
Rivers Are Falling Rapidly and
Normal Levels Are Expected Sunday

COLUMBUS, O., July 17.—All rivers in central Ohio, which have been out of their banks two days, were falling rapidly tonight. Weather bureau officials predicted that with favorable weather normal levels would be reached tomorrow. Reports received today by the state agricultural commission indicate Ohio's crop was damaged by storm and flood at least ten per cent and that the damage to wheat probably would exceed that figure. Onions also suffered.

With the passing of the flood at Lima, serious sanitation problems confronted city officials. Precautions were taken to guard against the outbreak of an epidemic.

Hundreds of persons, driven from their homes by the high water at Lima and other cities in the flood district, are able to return tonight but large areas in that section still were under water.

You Must Drink Some Good Beer
PHYSICIANS frequently prescribe beer because they realize that the small amount of alcohol it contains is easily assimilated, aids digestion, and its mildly stimulating qualities quicken the bodily functions into healthful action.
When a man drinks beer he drinks and eats at the same time, just as when he eats a bowl of soup. A man might more properly be said to eat beer than to eat certain kinds of soup, or indeed, watermelon. It is both food and drink.
Drink beer and eat moderately—that is the physician's advice to the man who is "all run down." The moderate beer drinker and eater is in a far better position than the total abstainer, who often consumes an excess of solid food. Beer builds tissues, restores waste, furnishes heat and produces energy.

Atlanta's Original Cut-Price Druggists

THIRTY-ONE years ago the JACOBS' Drug Stores entered the Atlanta field—and for those three decades we have striven, year after year, month after month, week after week, and day after day, to give the people of Atlanta a service that could not be surpassed. We believe we have succeeded. The ever increasing patronage that has come to us voluntarily is, we think, proof that we have not only given Atlanta a service that has not been surpassed, but one that has not and cannot be equaled.

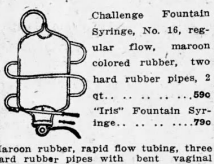

WE instituted a policy of "Cut Prices," and we have steadily maintained that policy; we began by selling the people of Atlanta the purest drugs and the best of drug sundries at lower prices than they could be bought elsewhere, and today we are still doing that same thing. Tomorrow JACOBS' eleven stores will be selling drugs, and all that a good drug store sells, for less money than other stores sell the same articles for; day after tomorrow we will be doing the same thing; next year; the year after, and as long as we are in business our policy of "Cut Prices" will be maintained.

WE SERVE not only the people of Atlanta, but the people of Georgia, the people of the whole country. Our Mail Order Department was organized along scientific lines, and we are prepared to handle every order by mail, whether large or small, with dispatch. We guarantee the same satisfaction to our Mail Order Patrons that we guarantee to the people of Atlanta, who come in person to buy at our stores. So whether you who read this live in or out of Atlanta, the JACOBS' stores and the JACOBS' "Cut Price" policy is yours to use whenever you need us or our service.

W. & A. RAILWAY HOLDS CENTER OF STAGE NOW

On Tuesday W. & A. Committees of Senate Will Leave for Inspection Tour

The Western and Atlantic railroad will occupy the legislative spotlight during the coming week and all other matters will take second place.

On Tuesday morning the Western and Atlantic committees of the house and senate will leave for a two-day inspection of the road and the terminal properties in Chattanooga, and the entire senate and many members of the house will go with them.

The house, although it did not adjourn so that all members could accompany the committees, granted leave of absence to all members desiring to make the trip, and indicated that a large number will avail themselves of the privilege.

On the senate side the absence of the Western and Atlantic committee leaves less than a dozen members, and hence the senate had practically no choice except to adjourn. This met with the approval, however, of all members of the senate, as they are exceedingly anxious to familiarize themselves with the right of way of the road, the condition of the roadbed, the number of stations and the location, extent and all other details of the terminal properties of the road in Chattanooga.

The house and senate both convene at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The senate is likely to reach a vote on the bill by Senator Parsons prohibiting the issuance of a charter to any railroad company to build a line parallel to the Western and Atlantic. Already the senate has passed Senator Parsons' constitutional amendment containing this prohibition. The bill is designed to protect the road by starting competition for one year. Meanwhile it is absolutely necessary that the senate should pass by statutory amendment, and Senator Parsons bill is drawn to meet this purpose.

The Western and Atlantic railroad committee of the senate has approved the bill and it is believed that the house will practically without opposition, as the constitutional amendment went through with only two votes against it.

The house will be in session Tuesday and Wednesday, while the senate will adjourn until Tuesday.

The two W. & A. committees are gone to Chattanooga, and most of the members of the house and senate will be there, generally being a local application, and unaccounted general bills.

CAPTAIN JOHN KEELY DIED 27 YEARS AGO

Founder of Keely Company Still Mourned by Many Friends on Anniversary

Yesterday was the twenty-seventh anniversary of the death of Captain John Keely, founder of the Keely company, a well known Atlanta department store, and many Atlantians who knew and loved him took occasion to pay a tribute of respect to his memory.

Probably no man has lived in Atlanta who had more friends than Captain Keely, or exerted a stronger influence for progress and for good.

He was a splendid merchant and a most lovable gentleman. John Keely was born in the department heads in Mr. Rich & Bros. Co., who was with the Keely company in many ways by and was a friend of Captain Keely, has a copy of The Atlanta Journal of July 15, 1888, the day Captain Keely died.

On the front page is a two-column sketch of Captain Keely and a picture of him in the old style engraving. Mr. Crawford prides the paper among his most cherished possessions.

FORDON, THE TAILOR, MOVES ON PEACHTREE

Mr. Fordon, the tailor, has moved from 8-10 North Pryor street, the stand he had occupied for twenty years, to 107 Peachtree street, where he now stands this popular tailoring establishment has been fitted out in the most modern manner. New styles are there for the man who is looking for the better kind of clothes, and Mr. Fordon invites his friends and patrons, as well as the general public, to come to see him in his new business location.—(Adv.)

Shortest Soldier

PARIS, June 10.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) The shortest soldier in the French army is Guy Couderc, who stands 4 feet 10 inches. He is a solidly built man, and a picture of a soldier's load. When he presented himself at the recruiting office at Versailles the surgeon on duty refused to examine him, but later he was incorporated in the 16th Infantry at Lens. The butt of ridicule because of his diminutive stature, he proved he could follow the color, and soon earned the stripes of corporal.

More Men Are Called
CALCUTTA, June 15.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—All Europeans and descendants of Europeans in French India, who were born between 1867 and 1897, are being called up for military service. This means that all those between 18 and 48 years of age will go to the colors. Almost every French family in India is affected. Contingents will sail for Europe from mid-July until late in August.

GAINESVILLE BOOSTERS SEE THE BEST OF NORTHEAST GEORGIA AND HER PEOPLE

A GROUP OF GAINESVILLE BOOSTERS AND THE PACEMAKING CAR.

"Motor Tour Helps Us Know Each Other Better," Says Business Men of Hall County. "Let's Have Another!"

BY DUDLEY GLASS.

"It isn't so much to boost Gainesville as it is to get together among ourselves," explained B. S. Barker. "You see, Gainesville is absorbing some of that spirit you Atlanta folks thought you had. It's a fine thing, and it's a fine thing that our about Pull for Gainesville of Pull Out." Well, that's the spirit.

Mr. Barker, who is general manager of the Gainesville and Northwestern railroad and president of the Gainesville chamber of commerce, was explaining why more than 100 business men took their cars, their families and three days off for a motor tour through northeast Georgia, a tour which began Thursday morning, traversed fourteen counties and forty or more towns and ended Saturday night, with more than 300 miles registered on the speedometer.

The Gainesville chamber of commerce isn't such a big body of men, but it is a big body, and it is a big body that we wanted to get acquainted with all the folks in our territory," remarked Ben M. Merck, at the wheel of the pace-making car. "But more than anything else we wanted to know each other better. And since we have begun working together for the city we have found our competitors aren't half as bad fellows as some of us had thought."

EVERYBODY A BOOSTER. When somebody suggested a "Booster Tour" everybody took heart. Albert Hardy, who conducts the Gainesville News, got busy among his fellow-boosters advertised the tour in every county on the route, and then came and got out a "Booster Edition" of the News crammed full of information about Hall county, her people and her enterprises. They sent a pathfinding car over the route, made arrangements for rounding up fried chicken for 200 hungry travelers, and Thursday night fifty cars full of tourists were registered on the film.

Practically every business in Gainesville was represented on the tour, but there was no effort to sell goods or talk business along the route. Mr. Barker is the man who put the new railroad through the Nacoochee valley, opening a way to what residents declare is the richest country since Eden was lost—and proved it. B. H. Merck is the head of a big wholesale grocery house, and just now is nursing Gainesville's infant industry, the Merck-Herick hosiery mills, which employ several dozen girls in turning cotton into socks. J. P. Carter, secretary of the chamber, is a wholesale grocer and E. B. Barrett is of the Pruitt-Barrett Hardware company. H. M. Stallworth, who manages two big cotton mills, is one of the liveliest of the boosters, and G. C. Reed, manager of the Southern Bell Telephone company at Gainesville, was perhaps the busiest man on the tour. W. H. Summers, A. E. Hardy and John H. Hesch were the committee which helped to arrange details of the trip. The tour was represented by John Smith, supervisor of roads, and among the boosters to mention only a few of them—were H. M. Newman, Henry H. Bates, C. A. Rudolph, W. H. Slack, J. C. Pruitt and W. A. Roper, all good Gainesville boosters. President H. J. Pearce, who is full of confidence in the most enthusiastic of the tourists, and Congressman Thomas Bell proved just as eloquent a speaker outside his home district as within it.

THE PEOPLE, THE ROADS AND THE CROPS of Northeast Georgia proved a revelation to the visitors, especially to those who were paying their first visit to this section. The tourists took the hills on high speed for four hours. Even the motor track which carried the brass band and which wasn't much as a cycling road, stuck at the pace-maker's heels all the way without so much as a cycling protest.

Out of Gainesville over a splendid "top-sold" road swept the tourists. They passed a few farms, a few mountains, just inside the county line, and then into the heart of the county, passing Cleveland and swinging around the big "reservation" where Congressmen Bell is raising a few million in scale, around the foot of towering Nacoochee, and through the beautiful Nacoochee valley, perhaps the most fertile bit of soil in all Georgia. Travellers could hardly do better than to start with a tour of Nacoochee. But they must abandon the rest of their tour and settle down here.

Crossing over mountain highways into Habersham county, the tourists stopped at Clarkesville, where the first reception of the route was given them. The Clarkesville folks had fed peaches and lemonade waiting for the visitors, and a pleasant time was had by all, as the local editor noted on his scratch pad. From Clarkesville the tourists hurried to Cornelia, back on the South-eastern main line, where an hour was spent at dinner.

There had been a heavy rain just ahead of the Gainesville folk, and the descent of Dick's Hill and its rivals between Cornelia and Toccoa, added a spice of adventure to the trip. Every car skidded and a few found the bottom of the ditch, but they all landed right side up in Toccoa, and the Gainesville tour was a live town and able to demonstrate it.

OFF FOR HOME TOWN. Saturday morning the tourists left for perhaps the most difficult run of the three days, past Rowell and Alpharetta over the mountain roads to Dahlonega and home. They were due to arrive in Gainesville late Saturday evening.

That the Gainesville tour was an annual event, with changes in the routes traversed, was accepted as a fact without discussion before the first journey was half over.

"It has done us all good," said one of the party, in an address on the road. "We've seen the prettiest and best country in all Georgia, we believe, and it has opened our eyes. We want all of you to come and see Hall county and Gainesville. We wish we could visit all Georgia and all Georgia could visit us. And if every town enjoys a motor tour as much as we have, why, Gainesville will be getting acquainted next summer."

THE SECOND DAY'S RUN. Friday morning the cars gathered at Gainesville, county seat of Franklin, and checked out for the run to Homer, county seat of Banks. From Homer the tourists entered Jackson county, stopping at Marysville and being welcomed here not only by Marysville folk but by a party of Commerce motorists, who escorted them in to that bustling town. There was more lemonade and more chicken here, and the board of trade, the Daughters of the Confederacy and the Civic club vied with each other in making the visitors comfortable.

Jefferson, one of the oldest of Georgia towns, and county seat of Jackson county, was the next stop. Then the tourists turned on the gas for Winder, capital of the new county of Barrow, where a fine dinner and hearty welcome awaited them.

From Winder the tour crossed into Gwinnett. The cars were on the Journal-Herald national highway now, and the pace was fast. And at Lawrenceville the visitors had the heartiest demonstration of the whole tour. Brass bands and a pair of mounted policemen escorted them in and out of the town, and there were more lemonade and cigars, and speeches by J. A. Perry, Mayor N. S. Robinson and Isaac L. Oakes.

of the Cotton Interests in This Country.

That the department of state is making strong representations looking toward the protection of the cotton interests of this country and fully realizes the difficulties surrounding the exportation of cotton, is the substance of a letter just received by the Atlanta chamber of commerce from Alvey A. Ade, second assistant secretary of state.

The letter comes in reply to resolutions recently adopted by the chamber of commerce urging the president and the state department to bring great pressure on Great Britain to revoke the order in council, which practically places an embargo on cotton shipments to Europe.

Not only has the local trade body adopted resolutions urging prompt action, but letters have been sent to every trade organization in the state, urging the adoption of similar resolutions.

The letter from the state department has proven most gratifying to President Joel Wilkinson, Secretary Walter Cooper, and other officers and members of the chamber of commerce.

Mr. Ade's letter follows:
"Department of State, Washington, July 14, 1915.
"Mr. W. G. Cooper, Secretary Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta, Ga.
"Sir: The department acknowledges the receipt of your telegram dated July 1, 1915, addressed to the president of the United States, in regard to the difficulties being experienced in making shipments of cotton to Europe at this time.

There are enclosed copies of the British order in council of March 11, 1915, and the department's reply thereto. The British order in council is still the subject of diplomatic discussion between this government and the government of Great Britain.

The department keenly appreciates the difficulties surrounding the exportation of cotton from this country and is endeavoring to do all that it properly can to relieve the situation.

While it is not possible to outline the exact methods to be pursued by the department, you may rest assured that strong representations looking toward the protection of the interests of this important commodity and those connected with it are being and will be made. Further than this assurance, the department would not care to indicate the method at this time.

Realizing the limitations of the market for cotton arising from the war situation, the department has from time to time called for reports of the market for cotton in foreign countries from its regular officers stationed abroad with a view to indicate any possible openings for cotton that might relieve the situation due to the decreased exportations to Europe.

Copies of these reports may be obtained from the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce.

I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
"For the Secretary of State:
(Signed) ALVEY A. ADE,
Second Assistant Secretary."

(By Associated Press.)
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 17.—Harry K. Thaw, who arrived here late last night after having been set free under bail by the New York supreme court, took two dips in the ocean today and shook hands with hundreds of persons. Early in the day he shunned crowds but later he disregarded the gaze of the curious and went about as he pleased. He said he would go to Philadelphia Sunday and leave for Pittsburgh Monday.

During the morning in his room and at noon tried to take a stroll along the boardwalk. A crowd soon followed and he sought relief in a public bath house where he hired a bathing suit and took a plunge in the ocean under the eyes of his private detectives. Hundreds of persons watched him.

During the afternoon he went on a shopping tour and at 8 o'clock took his second bath. Wherever he went, Thaw was stopped by men and women who wanted to shake his hand.

"WILD-CAT" STILL NEAR MARIETTA IS WRECKED

Raiding Officers Find Four Hundred Gallons of Whisky Mash

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
MARIETTA, Ga., July 17.—Hidden in an underground "wildcat" still ten miles north of Marietta in Cobb county, near the Milton line, four hundred gallons of whisky mash was found and destroyed on the farm of Melvin Hames by Deputy Revenue Agent Sowell, of Atlanta, and Sheriff W. E. Swanson of Cobb county, Saturday afternoon.

The officers wrecked the still and all of its appurtenances. Hames' wife and children were at home, but Hames was not to be found. The federal authorities have put out their dragnet to catch him.

The still was within 100 yards of Hames house, hidden in a cave dug into a hillside near a branch. It had a capacity of about fifty gallons of whisky. Sheriff Swanson said it looked as if it had been in use for several years.

Complaints from residents near Hames' farm caused the raid.

PROSPERITY EVIDENCED BY STEEL MARKET BOOM

Advance of $6 a Ton in Price of Steel Bars Since First of Year

The steel industry is regarded as the one infallible business barometer of America, and by this token it may be accepted as a fact that prosperity is on the wing.

The steel industry is on a boom. The price of steel bars has been advanced to $125 per 100 pounds, by one big manufacturing plant and the United States Steel corporation has increased the price of bars from $125 to $130 per 100. The advance approximates $1 a ton.

Early in the year, the prices were as low as $1 per 100, so that the recent increase represents an advance of $6 per ton.

Early in the year the prices were as low as $1 per 100, so that the recent increase represents an advance of $6 per ton.

The iron Age, commenting on iron and steel conditions of the past week, says: "A further increase in steel production has become necessary to keep pace with the continued expansion of demand. July developments have come to strengthen the situation that steel manufacturers now speak with assurance concerning the remainder of the year. Following the announcement of an increase of 43,000 tons in the Steel corporation's unfilled orders in June—a total that exceeded estimates in the trade—the corporation has started up four more blast furnaces and a considerable number of open-hearth furnaces, and the week's working schedule represents 90 per cent of its input capacity. The remaining blast furnaces are at Cleveland, Lorain, South Chicago, and Pittsburgh. In addition the Riverside plant at Wheeling, W. Va., consisting of two blast furnaces and two Bessemer converters, idle for two years, has been ordered into commission.

"Further evidence of growing consumption is the purchase of outside steel by the Steel corporation. It has now placed orders for 50,000 tons of billets with eastern steel works, including the 15,000 tons reported one week ago, besides 15,000 tons divided among three eastern western companies, two in Ohio, and one in the Pittsburgh district, making a total of 70,000 tons. As 80 per cent of its blast furnace capacity is now running, it is not expecting to buy pig iron in the open market.

New business this month has been at about the same rate as in June, when the steel corporation shipped nearly 40,000 tons a day and booked 54,000 to $5,000 tons a day. Its export business amounts to 10,000 tons a day.

An advance in bars, plates, and structural shapes to 130 cent, Pittsburgh, for third quarter delivery was made by the Carnegie Steel company and Illinois Steel company on Tuesday, and a similar advance was announced at the beginning of the week by the Cambria Steel company.

There is no end in sight to the bar tonnage required for ships, and buyers are looking farther ahead. Contracts covering one and two years are now proposed, one calling for more than 100,000 tons of rounds. The bar specifications of agricultural machinery makers have increased, and Chicago reports early resumption of such plants, whereas earlier plans looked to starting in September.

The delay in placing in this country Russian orders for 200,000 tons of steel, for which Russia has been largely a matter of terms, some manufacturers have been unwilling to accept cash and part deferred payments, but it is reported, without direct confirmation, that two Central Western steel companies have taken this business, one receiving 125,000 tons and the other 75,000 tons.

In pig iron the feature is the purchase of 40,000 to 50,000 tons of basic iron by a Youngstown steel company from a Cleveland furnace that is about to be started. The delivery price, $13, being below the present basic pig iron. A sale of 5,000 tons of basic has been made at $13 at Shanago valley furnace, and one of 10,000 tons of Bessemer iron of special chemistry $10 valley furnace has been quoted. The Central Western situation in steel-making is stronger. Foundry firms, however, have not shown corresponding firmness.

WALTER TAYLOR IS PICKED AS "PA" BY 37 CHILDREN

Kids at Home for Friendless
Beg City Clerk to Adopt
Them for His Own

In the opinion of 37 children, Walter Taylor, city clerk, would make an ideal father.

For all of the 37, within the space of four minutes, asked to adopt him as a fond parent.

Mr. Taylor Friday afternoon stopped at the corner of Highland avenue and Randolph street to catch a car. As he had four minutes to wait for a trolley he walked over to the steps of the Home for the Friendless, where he saw a number of children playing. As he paused for a moment, a chubby-faced youngster of about four summers, rushed up to him, and jumping from the top of the steps, throwing his arms around the city clerk's neck.

"Man," he said, "are you going to adopt me?"

As rapid as Mr. Taylor is with his answers, he hadn't framed one for that question before he was surrounded by children, who came running from all parts of the yard.

"I hadn't thought of adopting a boy," murmured the clerk.

"Well, man, I wish you would adopt me," said the little fellow, who still kept his arms about Taylor's neck.

Another youngster of about the same age crowded closer than the others and tried to pull the first one from Mr. Taylor's arms.

"Mister," said the second boy, "I wish you to adopt me and my little brother, too."

"No, no, adopt me," the others began shouting one by one.

In a couple of minutes Mr. Taylor had 37 offers of adoption.

The number has been accurately computed, for the first child, a penny who spied the ideal parent, had a penny clinked in his hand, and when he found that he couldn't possibly prevail on Mr. Taylor to adopt him, he gave the clerk instructions to take the penny and rush to the corner drug store for candy.

Mr. Taylor took the penny and "with it" bought a "cannon cracker" filled with candy for each child who wanted to be his son, and 37 of the candy-crackers were distributed.

BRITAIN APPEALS FOR COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Urges County Superintendents to Bring Pressure on Legislators

A campaign for a compulsory education bill and for other bills pending before the general assembly that affect educational matters was launched Saturday by M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of schools in a letter to all of the county superintendents in the state.

Mr. Brittain urges the county superintendents, who favor compulsory education, and several other bills pending before the assembly to communicate with their representatives at once.

"There is apparently an unanimity of opinion about these bills," the state superintendent writes.

The parts of Mr. Brittain's letter referring to pending legislation, follow:

"Compulsory and school officials should, of course, not be indifferent about legislative educational matters. It is not only your right as a citizen, but it is a duty also to let your representatives know your attitude with regard to measures affecting the work in which you are engaged, and which you naturally understand better than those who see only a few minutes occasionally in the matter, or who, perhaps, have in mind merely ammunition for political purposes. The keenest need we have in Georgia, so far as the legislature can effect it, is for prompt and businesslike monthly payments everywhere to the teachers of the state. Two bills have been presented which appear to give us help at this point. In the hands of Messrs. Jones, of Coweta, Ledbetter, of Polk and Swift, of Muscogee, and in the hands of Mr. Ramsey, have introduced bills authorizing the governor and controller-general to add from one-tenth to one-half a mill to the general tax rate this fall—not, however, making it any greater than it has been before last year—in order to have enough money in the treasury to pay teachers promptly for a few months at least each year. These and the measure introduced by Senator Walker authorizing the governor to issue warrants monthly in order that these may be utilized for the teachers without delay, and at as low a rate of interest as possible, are the first that will aid public school education in Georgia most in my opinion.

Half a dozen bills have been presented looking towards compulsory education. In all probability these will be considered and measures will be introduced in the house and senate consolidating the good features of all present bills, so that a sensible act may be prepared, requiring parents to send their children for at least three months each year until all have received some education. Other important measures are being considered, and among those which deserve our special attention are the bill to authorize the state superintendent of schools and the attorney general to prepare an educational code for the state, and a measure to allow county superintendents to be elected by boards—either county or state—and let them be chosen in accordance with merit and qualifications, just as a school superintendent of a city or town is selected.

Experience has shown that there is a wide difference about most other educational measures presented, but, from discussions which have come to me, it would appear that there is much unanimity of opinion about these mentioned. If you feel that they should be enacted the law please let your representatives know.

TWO MEN CONTRACT TO SNARE 50 MILLION FLIES

City Agrees to Pay Experts 25 Cents Per Quart for Pests

Fifty million flies are going to be captured and put into the health department's detention camp in the next few weeks if the work of Generals Richardson and White, recently of Douglas, Ariz., is successful.

The campaign will cost the city $500, for the board of health Friday afternoon made a contract to pay the two gentlemen from Arizona, both of whom are lawyers, the sum of 25 cents per quart of flies captured within the limits of the city of Atlanta.

Messrs. Richardson and White expect to capture the flies not with Krupps guns, but with a new sort of trap, recently patented by C. W. Curry, of Douglas.

About 600 of the traps will be set in different parts of the city selected by the two men. They expect to go to work on Monday.

Dr. Smith expresses the opinion that the campaign against the flies will likely result in a great benefit to the city, besides snuffing it immediately of all the flies captured in the traps. It will show where the most flies breed, and enable the sanitary department to eliminate the breeding places.

Dr. Smith estimates that there are about 60,000 eggs in most fly nests, and the sanitary department in the past has directed most of its attention to finding the nest and smashing the eggs.

LEGISLATOR BLACKBURN A BUSY MAN THESE DAYS

Finds It a Hard Job to Be a Lawmaker and Practice
Law at Same Time

Bob Blackburn, senior member of the Fulton county legislative trio, is a busy man these days. So occupied is his time with the business of the legislature that he can scarcely find a minute in which to attend to his professional business.

Legislator Blackburn appeared in the court of Judge Pennington Saturday along with Attorneys Alaine Chambers and James L. Key, all interested as counsel in pending injunction proceedings. The attorneys wanted to argue the case, and the court wanted to accommodate them, but Mr. Blackburn pleaded that his legislative duties required most of his time.

"How about Sunday?" facetiously asked Judge Pennington.

Mr. Blackburn admitted that the case might be argued on some Sunday, but it was finally agreed that all hands should meet at the court house about 10 o'clock one of these mornings and try to conclude the case before the meeting of the legislature on that particular date.

GERMANS FIND FRENCH WINE HIDDEN IN "GRAVES"

COLOGNE, June 15.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—When the German army moved in and took possession of Leon last fall they found a curious shortage of wine in a section of France where wine ordinarily is about as plentiful as water.

Then one day a French shell landed inadvertently on what appeared to be the grave of a French soldier, and its explosion was followed by the sound of breaking glass. The Germans investigated and found the "grave" was in reality a small wine cellar. The French had merely buried their wine and erected a cross to disarm suspicion.

A careful scrutiny of the numerous "graves" around Leon kept the hospitals supplied for some time, but eventually the supply again gave out.

Seven German naval officers have just reached the rank of vice admiral. Among them are Admiral Souchon, who is in the Black sea, operating against the Russian fleet, and Admiral Hipper, who was in command of the German cruisers in the Bosphorus bank fight of January 24.

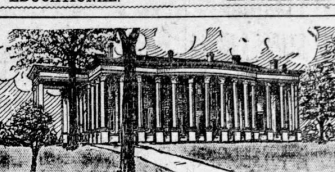

Includes fifty-seven French machines, forty-seven British, twenty-six Russian and five Belgian.

In the Dardanelles the Turks have disposed of five English aeroplanes and eight more English airmen have been interned in Holland after landing there by mistake.

No figures have been made public as to the losses of the German air corps.

SCHOOL REGISTRATION MUST CLOSE AUG. 15

Changes of Residents Must Present Their Cards for Transfers

Superintendent of Schools L. M. Landrum urges that children who expect to enter the public schools this fall register at once at the school department for the books will not be issued until August 15, and children not registered by that date will have to wait until the others are seated before they can be assigned to schools.

Superintendent Landrum has issued the following statement relative to the registration of children:

"It is necessary that our school registration for the year 1915-16 be completed by August 15.

"To complete this registration the following directions must be observed: Pupils who have moved from one place of residence since those of the schools, June 4, 1915, must bring their cards to this office, 414 Chamber of Commerce Building, and get transfers. This does not refer to High School pupils or to those promised to High School.

All pupils who heretofore attended the Atlanta Public Schools but withdrew for any cause and who were not present at the close of the schools must secure new admission tickets. If these pupils have been away from the Atlanta Schools two years or more they must present new vaccination certificates signed by a physician. Those who have been out less than two years do not need new vaccination certificates but may get admission tickets on a statement that they have attended the Atlanta Schools and withdrew at a time specified.

All applicants who have never attended the Atlanta Schools must present at this office a certificate of successful vaccination signed by Atlanta physicians in order to get admission tickets. A child may be admitted to school if an Atlanta physician certifies that he has vaccinated the child three times without success within three months. This vaccination will then be attended to later by the visiting physicians. Children who are six years old or above are entitled to seats, but if a child shall become six years old by October 15, 1915, he must wait until the opening of the schools, they are entitled to be admitted to the schools at the beginning according to the rules of the Board of Education.

Negro children do not apply at this office for admission tickets. They are admitted to school on the presentation of the proper vaccination certificates. "It is very necessary that these matters be attended to at once. On admission tickets issued, children will be assigned to a particular school. From the admission tickets distribution cards are made out and kept in this office. By the use of these cards pupils are later assigned to a particular school according to rules laid down by the Board of Education. Notices of assignment will be given to all new pupils and transfers. Time must be given to this office to make these assignments and the registration of pupils must be closed early that this work may be done properly. All pupils properly registered by August 15, will be first considered in assignments. If a child is attending to this matter until after the registration for the opening of schools is closed, they must wait until the registered pupils are seated and then take their chances for seats for their children.

The books for registration were opened at the white grammar schools before their close, June 4, and they have been open at this office since the close of last year.

Fund for War Sufferers

ROME, June 25.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Among the funds which are pouring into the committee in every city of Italy to provide relief for those who are suffering directly or indirectly through the war, an interesting contribution of nearly $500 has been received by the committee for civil preparation at Bologna. The committee existed during the war of independence in 1866, and this sum, which was then only $50, was made the permanent fund for the fund after the war was over. It was devoted to the relief of the poor, a well known patriot of the town, and in forty-nine years it has more than doubled itself.

Little Word "Not" Came Near Annuling Entire Georgia Code

Crawford Wheatley's Sharp Ear Detects Error in House Bill and State Is Saved From Embarrassing Situation

It certainly pays to have a man with a high degree of sense of hearing in the house of representatives. Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter county, proved it Friday, by preventing the house from repealing the whole code of Georgia laws.

If it hadn't been for the fact that J. R. T. Bowden, the new reading clerk in the house, reads every word and bill when the same is put on in its passage—omitting no syllable or line thereof—and if it hadn't been for the further fact that Crawford Wheatley, while he may seem to be giving only casual notice to what's going on, is really on the alert every minute with eyes and ears—"If it hadn't been for these things, the house would have been in a fair way of putting the state of Georgia in the device of a situation."

A bill was on its passage. Its last section, as do last sections of all bills, repealed conflicting laws. But this particular repealing clause contained the most potent and powerful word in the English language—"Not," that word which in the language of a rhymer is the old rhetoric, "can choke a felon into the No. 1 or No. 2 cell."

So that the section reads as follows: "Be it further enacted that all laws and parts of laws NOT in conflict with this act and the same are hereby repealed."

"The 'not' didn't sound as loud as the capital letters indicate. In fact, it didn't make any sound at all on anybody's ear drum but Crawford Wheatley's."

The gentleman from Sumter was just about to step out of the hall into the lobby on the left to get a drink of water.

"Mr. Speaker," he shouted, wheeling about.

"Gentleman from Sumter," droned the speaker.

"If the clerk will read the repealing clause again I think the house will perceive that in its shape it repeals all the laws of Georgia."

The clerk read the repealing clause again. The house gasped, then laughed.

"I ask unanimous consent," said the gentleman from Sumter, "that the word 'not' be stricken from the clause."

The chair heard no objection. The code of Georgia was saved. The gentleman from Sumter resumed his journey to the water cooler.

Plot Against the King

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 18.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—An anarchy plot to assassinate King Ferdinand has been disclosed in the court-martial trial of seven persons accused of complicity in the bomb outrage at the Sofia Casino on February 13. The accused described themselves "Statins," this before the trial of the anarchy group to which they belong and which, under the leadership of a man named Anastoff, was concerned in a conspiracy to assassinate the king two years ago.

The February bomb outrage occurred in the midst of an official ball, and resulted in the death of a daughter of the minister of war, and the injury of many others. Those killed included the son of the minister of war, and a daughter of a former war minister.

What the details were of the plot against the king have not been made public.

SOUTHERN ENDS YEAR WITH SPLENDID RECORD

16,500,000 Passengers Handled and None Killed in Train Accidents, Says Report

More than sixteen and a half million passengers were transported by the Southern railway during the year ended June 30, and not one was killed in a train accident. Only one fatal injury occurred to a passenger while on a train and that one was standing on a car platform in direct violation of the company's rules.

This record was shown in the official figures given out Saturday by Vice President H. W. Miller, indicating the high degree of safety that has been attained in the handling of Southern railway passenger trains. It was pointed out that the number of passengers handled exceeded the combined population of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky.

In marked contrast are figures recently given out by President Harry Harrison, of the Southern, showing that every one of which accidents could have been prevented had the driver of the car observed the familiar warning, "Stop, Look and Listen."

GRAVE SITUATION IS CREATED BY ATTACK ON STEAMER ORDUNA

as some of the American passengers file their statements of what took place, the question undoubtedly will be brought immediately to the attention of the German government for a report from its submarine commander on the circumstances of the attack.

The case is believed to be different from that of the Californian and the Armenian, which were ordered to halt but repeatedly attempted to escape capture. According to the rules of international law, even though neutrals are on board, the use of force is held to be justified to compel submission.

The captain and officers of the Orduna have stated that no warning of signal had been given when the torpedo was seen streaking through the water. Officials here thought, therefore, that any attempt to force the Orduna to escape was probably justified. Her subsequent actions they believed could be upheld in the interest of self-defense.

In the case of the Orduna, no signal was given to the Orduna to halt or whether the shots fired by the Germans came without warning, the view which impressed officials tonight was that the Orduna was not a passenger ship, but a vessel engaged in the transport of munitions and other war materials.

LANSING AWAITS NOTICE. Secretary Lansing said tonight he would have no announcement to make until the case until it was brought to his attention in some official way by Americans who were passengers on the ship.

Believed that the Orduna was a passenger ship, the American ambassador in Berlin concerning the case being exercised by German submarines, which had been ordered to attack the Orduna.

The belief was general that when President Wilson laid the entire situation before the cabinet next Tuesday, there would be insistence by many cabinet officers for a more drastic action.

It was based largely on the absence of any cases of attack without warning in several weeks.

The only important case of attack without warning that has occurred since the Lusitania was sunk is that of the American steamer Nebraska, which was bound for the United States and without cargo, Germany has expressed regret that it occurred and that it caused no damages, but it was pointed out tonight that the United States took the position that it was a case of attack without warning.

On the other hand officials may decide to wait for a report from the German government as to the German government's version of the affair. This may be delayed for several weeks as in past experience German submarines have not returned to base to report only after long intervals have elapsed.

SUGGESTION NOT TENABLE. That the American note to Germany probably would be written in the light of the Orduna's experience, however, was indicated by officials. They pointed out that the suggestion of a change in the practice of German submarines, primarily engaged in passenger trade no longer seemed tenable.

No indication has been given as yet in official quarters of what the next American note would contain, but it was admitted among those in authority that the communication doubtless would convey some hint of the purpose and intentions of the United States in case there was a further violation of its rights. The note probably will be brief and according to well-informed opinion, will be in the nature of a warning of subsequent violations of the principles contended for by the United States will be viewed as hostile acts, making the continuance of diplomatic relations impossible.

Passengers Declare Ship Was Given No Warning.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The Cunard liner Orduna from Liverpool to New York with 247 passengers including 22 Americans, was attacked without warning, it was learned on her arrival here today, by a German submarine on the morning of July 9.

Twenty miles from the grave yard of the Lusitania off Old Head of Kinsale, the Orduna escaped the Lusitania's fate by one-half a second of time or ten feet of space, the German torpedo churning the water that distance behind the liner's rudder. The Orduna escaped away. She was followed by the submarine which rose to the surface, aimed a gun and shelled the surface.

The attack was timed at 10 minutes to 6 o'clock in the morning when all but a few of her passengers were asleep. Awakened by steam whistles, the passengers dressed hurriedly and went to the upper deck where they donned life belts and took their places at life boats. They heard the scream of the shells and saw the ocean split up columns of water where the missile struck. When the fire grew hot, they were ordered, for their own protection, to the next deck below.

For half an hour the Orduna showed her heels to the assailant. Through morning glasses the passengers watched the low-lying German warship coming on with a lone in her teeth, but the Orduna's light was faster than the pursuit and after seven shots the warship, without effect, the submarine gave up the chase.

PROTEST TO BE MADE. A wireless call for help was sent out by the Orduna when the torpedo was near. She was then thirty-seven miles south of Queenstown. The reply, Captain Taylor said in his official report, was that help would be given within an hour. It was four hours before the

Unofficial reports through Geneva declare that at the lower end of this line Austrian troops who crossed the Meuse today that they would make their retreat turned into rout.

Fighting on the Austro-Italian front has resulted in few recent changes of position, according to the latest Rome report. Numerous Austrian attacks on the Italian advanced positions are recorded, all of which are declared to have been repulsed.

Attempts at solution of the South Wales coal strike problem failed again today. The miners' executive council adjourned until Monday after an abortive attempt to reach an agreement.

Official Statement of French War Office. PARIS, July 17.—The French war department today gave out the following statement:

"North of Arras the cannonading continued during the night. It was particularly violent north of Souchez and between Neuville and Rocquigny.

"In the Argonne the German bombardment continued in the region of Marle and in the forest of the Argonne. Two German attacks against our positions on the side of the Argonne (west of Nouvion) were repulsed.

"On the heights of the Meuse the bombardment continued during the night. In the forest of the Argonne, the German attacks against our positions on the side of the Argonne (west of Nouvion) were repulsed.

"In the Vosges the enemy last night launched an attack upon the positions he had lost at Ban-de-Saint. It was checked by our machine guns, fire and the fire of our machine guns.

"A coup attempted by the Germans at 11 p. m. on our works at the Fourmies (1,500 meters northwest of the village of Bonhomme) was completely repulsed.

"This official communication was issued by the war office, tonight. The New York Times said the German bombardment in the Argonne had diminished in intensity; some shells were fired into the forest of the Argonne.

"On the right bank of the Aisne, in the district of Troyon, there has been fighting with mines, as well as a very violent bombardment. Twenty shells were thrown into Rheims, one civilian being killed and one seriously wounded.

"In the Argonne the day has been relatively calm and no infantry action has occurred.

"On the heights of the Meuse the German attack after last night's bombardment, launched a violent attack against our positions from the Colonne trench to the village of Les Eaux. On the southern ridge of the Souvaux ravine they succeeded at only one point in regaining a footing in the trench section which we captured on July 6. Some parties of Germans who crept into the trench were killed or taken prisoners.

"Between the Souvaux ridge and the Colonne trench the enemy was also repulsed with heavy losses.

"There has been a continuous bombardment in the forest of Apremont."

Heat Hurts Wounded. CAIRO, June 15.—(Correspondence of Associated Press).—A heat wave has added to the agonies of the wounded men lying here from the Dardanelles. Surprise is openly expressed that Cairo should have been chosen as a convalescent center for the summer months, particularly in the case of dysentery patients, who would have a much better chance of prompt recovery in Alexandria on the sea.

Saturday night. He found the spray, thus hearing out in some measure the young man's story.

"This Wood boy is arrested with his harmless," he told detectives. "He's the greenest kid I ever saw. I just picked him up a month ago, and I know he'll never make a yegg. The Rosenfeld boy on Madison avenue was the only one he helped me with."

Wood don't all know of this, or of the other crimes "Mason" committed. "I never carried a gun," said "Mason."

"I didn't want to kill anybody," Mason is about five feet high, thin, dark hair and eyes, plainly but neatly dressed. He has a pleasant face, and a good presence. His fingers are soft as a baby's cheek.

Detectives were busy searching through their files Saturday night and dispatching wires to other cities in an effort to run down the various ends of "Mason's" story.

RENTING ACTIVITY HAS BEGUN IN ATLANTA; THE NEW HIGH SCHOOL APARTMENT HOUSES

Fall Renting Activity Already Shown at Renting Agencies

Most Leases Expire on September 1, and Tenants Who Expect to Make Changes, and Newcomers, Are Looking Over the Agents' Lists—Many New Apartments the Feature of the Season—Fine Time, Too, to Select Business Locations

Although over a month off, the fall renting season has really opened. Renting agencies during the past week reported that they saw in inquiries for houses, apartments and stores the beginning of preparations for the annual renting season.

Most of the leases terminate on September 1, and for this reason tenants who contemplate renewals or changes are making their preparations for the coming year.

From now on, all along in the fall, the renting agencies will be kept busy. All classes of property will be affected, from a fabulous central location to a $7 house. Some business concerns will want to get closer to the center, while others who are not retailers and do not depend on central locations, will go further out.

People who have been in the suburbs will want to move closer in, and city people will want to move further out.

APARTMENT HOUSE FEATURE. More than ever before has the apartment house become a feature of the renting season, and their popularity has increased. If anything, during the depression that followed the war.

From January 1 to July 1 this year, permits were issued for twenty-one new apartment houses in addition to the 100 or more already in existence. Plans have been made for still more apartment houses. The movement has struck Atlanta in common with most other American cities.

Of the twenty-one apartment house permits, however, all were of course not large ones. Some were for remodeling dwellings into two-family apartments. Others were for new buildings of frame construction to house from two to four families.

On this point, however, there are illustrations showing three new apartment houses costing $70,000, $60,000 and $45,000 each. The average cost of the new apartment houses has ranged from $20,000 to $120,000.

These buildings contain apartments ranging in size from two to eight and ten rooms. Some of the owners specialize in roomy courtyards and sun parlors and sleeping porches. The high class apartment house has developed features of convenience and comfort that a few years ago would have been considered impossible outside of the largest cities, to say nothing of attractiveness in architecture.

HOUSES FOR RENT. Popular as the apartments have been, the accompanying illustration shows how the apartment building, now being erected on Durant Place for S. R. Crawford, will appear upon completion.

The building is being constructed on a lot 126 feet front and 100 feet deep. It will contain twelve apartments ranging from three to five rooms in addition to sun parlors and sleeping porches. It will cost $40,000, and was designed by Harlan Blackley, the architect.

Cloud-Stanford Co. Leases Former Lester Book Co. Quarters at 60 Peachtree Street—Permits Asked for $45,000 Apartment House at Peachtree and Seventeenth Streets—$40,000 One Planned on Durant Place—Building Active

An important central lease announcement, and announcements of two new apartment houses neither of which had been mentioned before, featured real estate news of Saturday.

There were unofficial announcements of some large sales and exchanges which might be made known during the week. Agencies which specialize on homes report a good inquiry from people whose leases expire in September and who have decided to buy instead of rent.

PEACHTREE STREET LEASE. Benjamin D. Wilson has leased for Jack J. Spalding and Edward H. Inman to the Cloud-Stanford company the Inman-Spalding building at 60 Peachtree street and 57 North Broad street.

These are the quarters formerly occupied by the Lester Book company, and are across the street from the present location of the Cloud-Stanford company at 61 Peachtree street. The latter location was leased some time ago for occupancy on September 1, but the name of the lessee was withheld.

The new location of the Cloud-Stanford company consists of a three-story building facing 25 feet on Peachtree street with a depth of 135 feet through to Broad street. The lessees will occupy it on September 1, and in the meantime they will make alterations adapted to an apartment house business. Neither the term nor rental of the lease was disclosed.

NEW PEACHTREE APARTMENTS. Allison E. Timmons on Saturday made an application for a permit for an apartment house at Peachtree and Seventeenth streets, in Stanley Park. Work will be started at once and a permit will be granted shortly.

The building will cost $45,000 and will be a three-story brick structure. H. R. Hammond is the architect and Guide & Co. the contractors.

DURANT PLACE APARTMENTS. S. R. Crawford will start a new apartment house on Durant place near Ponce de León avenue. The plans are by Harlan Blackley, the architect.

The building will cost $40,000, and will have as features sleeping porches and sun parlors. The latter location was leased some time ago for occupancy on September 1, but the name of the lessee was withheld.

THE BLACKSTONE COURT APARTMENTS

WORK IS STARTED ON THE BLACKSTONE COURT

$70,000 Apartment House on Peachtree Street Has Many Novel Features

The accompanying illustration is the first picture of the Blackstone Court apartment house upon which work has been started at Peachtree and Fourth streets. The building will be completed by September 15, or in time for the fall opening.

The building occupies the center of a large lot facing Peachtree, Fourth and Juniper streets, so it has courts and air spaces on three street fronts.

The main entrance will be from Peachtree street, and here, as elsewhere, the entrance and court yard will be beautiful. There will be a court 100x45 facing Fourth street, while the Juniper street frontage will be used for tennis courts or as a children's playground. The walls of the building are already up one floor.

The courts will be beautified with special landscape work and will contain fountains.

The building itself will cost $70,000 and will contain thirty apartments, a feature of which is that they will be adjustable to any size. These apartments range from two to eight and nine rooms, with one or more baths. Twelve are living apartments and sixteen are housekeeping apartments. There will be a special court for the latter.

The building will be set back 110 feet from Peachtree and Juniper streets. It will be 300 feet deep and contain three stories.

In general style the building is Italian renaissance. The exterior will be finished in gray white impervious brick with terra cotta trimmings and there will be a tile roof. The rooms will be outside ones, with an abundance of light. From the upper stories a fine view can be had of the city.

The owners of the property are Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, Ralph P. Black, Mrs. John W. McDougald, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Lamar Cobb Tucker, of Athens. They are the architects and Guide & Co. the contractors. The latter have been at work on the building for three weeks. Thurman & Calhoun have charge of the renting of the building.

THE NORTH PARK APARTMENTS

The illustration shows the North Park apartment house at Piedmont avenue and Fourteenth street, which is practically completed and is open for inspection.

The building faces Piedmont park, which has developed into one of the most attractive parks in Atlanta. It is also at the Piedmont Driving club.

The building represents a cost of $60,000. It is three stories, and contains eighteen apartments, with sun parlors and sleeping porches a feature.

P. C. McDuffie, F. E. Mackie, W. H. Wynne and T. P. Kennedy are the owners, and Harlan Blackley the architect. M. L. Throver's agency has charge of the renting of the apartments.

5,000 FEET OF COMEDY IS SEEN IN "CROOKY"

With a plot ridiculous, a comedian with a remarkable gift of facial expression, with situations absolutely irresistible as mirth provokers, "Crooky," the Vitaphone Blue Ribbon production of the V-L-S-E program, to be seen at the Forsyth Friday and Saturday, will draw the ground demand from all who witness this wonderful feature comedy picture.

Frank Daniels is without doubt in his element in motion picture, and bids fair to become as popular as the lamented John Bunny, who was the idol of movie fans the world over.

It is a tremendous undertaking to turn out 5,000 feet of comedy that is sufficiently filled with mirth-provoking situations to keep up interest throughout; but with Frank Daniels as the foundation, the directors in charge of "Crooky" have injected some situations out of the usual that there is not a moment where interest lags.

Rev. J. Powell Tells How He Found New Strength to Give to His Labors

Rev. J. Powell, of Statesboro, Ga., suffered from stomach troubles so seriously that they affected his work.

He struggled on under the handicap as best he could—hardly realizing, perhaps, just how much his sickness was hurting him.

One day he learned of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. He took the first dose and then decided to take the full treatment. He wrote:

"Since using the six bottles of your wonderful remedy I feel like another man. It has been quite a wonder to me to know how one could have a stomach and around the heart get one on an absolute guaranty of not satisfactory money will be returned."

Now I can eat what I please and it doesn't hurt me night or day. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress of stomach and around the heart get one on an absolute guaranty of not satisfactory money will be returned."

The decline in these prices representing a decline of approximately 1-4c a yard since the late 1920s, when they were 5-6c a yard and other staple brown goods for domestic use have ruled quiet. NEW YORK, July 17.—A renewal of yesterday's late buying movement caused a further advance during today's earlier trading in the cotton market, but prices later eased off under realization of the fact that the market was 1 point lower to 1 point higher, near months being relatively easy.

At the close of the market yesterday here opened advanced, but the markets were opened unchanged to 5 points above the previous close, and advanced to 12 points above last night's closing figures during the first half hour. This advance was followed by a sharp decline, nearly 75 points above the low level of last Saturday, and it appeared that on this advance, the market was about to taper off. At any rate, the demand tapered off and prices closed at about the lowest point of the day and the market was left with a strong local selling for a reaction, after the sharp advance

The early buying season for the domestic stock market, and growing apprehensions of crop damage in southern areas, have caused some complaints are already beginning to show in fruit and vegetable markets. The reduction in the use of fertilizer in the eastern belt has caused a shortage of fertilizer exports within the next few days.

Price cables reported a small market with a steady undertone in Liverpool, and trading here was comparatively quiet after the early advance in the week. Reviews of the domestic goods market indicated continued activity in manufacture and distribution of goods, although the immediate demand is somewhat irregular owing to the seasonal character of certain industries in raw material.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Advices from southern Texas reflected this morning's market, owing to high temperatures and dry weather. The market was quiet, with only a few trading rapidly. Reports from the boll-weevil infested districts of Alabama and Georgia were to the effect that these pests were very numerous, and that the cotton crop in these states is daily becoming more numerous, and, in some sections, very heavy. The boll is set, to get decidedly serious before end of this month. The south end of the market is quiet, with the demand for short staple seedlings today, but the demand from Wall Street and shorts was sufficient to sustain prices. There is still a good-sized short interest in the market, and the market is

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

THE movement started by the Atlanta Woman's club to show motion pictures suited to childish understanding and helpfulness has spread to broad proportions and already twelve of the largest cities in Georgia have inaugurated a similar movement, and steps soon will be taken to make it a national one. Every one who has the interest and well-being of children at heart can recognize the preference of a censored subject to the promiscuous pictures to which the little tots are so often permitted to go seeking recreation and in many cases accompanying their mothers who find this an easy way to nurse their restless charges. Just as moving pictures have become a favorite amusement throughout the land to grow-ups the juveniles of the country are becoming a large part of the patronage of the movie theater. Recognizing this fact women's organizations have endeavored through various committees to secure pleasing films and with the help of the management to provide the most suitable and instructive pictures for the development of the childish imagination since facts and fancies, good or bad, are produced with equal effect on the child's mind. Looking on an animated object develops a quickness of perception and very often an unnatural listlessness in a child can be overcome with the interest excited by a beautiful fairy tale pictured upon the screen or the production of actual scenes with historic value. Just as the imagination can be aroused it can be controlled by the pictures which give the reality of much that the little mind has vaguely tried to imagine.

A hearty co-operation from hundreds of mothers in bringing their children on the days provided for their special entertainment has helped the movement to greater success and many have stated their intention of refusing to see pictures unsuited for childish minds and morals. The committee from the Woman's club which has the local movement in charge is composed of Mrs. Victor Krieshaber, chairman; Mrs. J. P. McGovern, Mrs. E. M. Horne, Mrs. Lyman J. Amsden, Mrs. Milton Strauss, Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, and Mrs. R. H. Sonn.

His Week In Atlanta Movies

Audience Applauds Sirand's Orchestra

An audience at the Strand theater enjoyed enthusiastically last week. Because of the picture? No. The picture was good, but the spectators applauded because they wanted another encore from the Strand orchestra, one of the best in the city, which had just completed the rendition of Schubert's Serenade.

When Ralph de Bruer took over the management of the Strand recently, he reorganized, among other things, the musical arrangement. A six-piece orchestra was engaged and renders music throughout every afternoon and evening.

At least once a day a regular concert program is given, the movie operator flashing on the screen that during the next half hour the Strand orchestra will render a series of Norwegian melodies, or grand opera, or ragtime, as the case may be.

And so an hour at the Strand is not only an hour with the movies, but an hour spent in listening to music as good as you could get anywhere in the city. It is an actual fact that the Strand local music lovers are now going to the Strand simply to hear the music. This in itself is worth the price of admission, to say nothing of the fine feature films the Strand is booking.

Montgomery Theater Renamed "Georgian"

The Montgomery theater is now the Georgian theater. The new name was chosen after an exciting contest in which hundreds of votes were cast, by many thousands. This name was selected as the most appropriate to adorn the portals of the beautiful Peachtree street entrance. The people who submitted the name "Georgian," and will be awarded prizes, are Attorney General Clifford L. Walker, J. L. Kirby, Miss Sallie Zahlan, Miss Lillian F. Wood and R. O. Stretcher.

The judges were J. W. Peacock, secretary of the Atlanta board of motion picture censorship, Bain Stewart, paying editor of the Fourth National Bank, C. A. Tandy, manager of the Southern Amusement Picture corporation, and R. L. Logan, manager of the theater.

Mr. Logan decided to change the name because it is no longer controlled or operated in any way whatsoever by the Montgomery interest. The new name "Georgian" will be spread in 16-inch letters, 2 feet high, which will be erected on a sign in front of the theater. Brilliantly lit, it will be made, it will add much to the appearance of the Georgian.

REEL HEROINES BECOME REAL HEROINES OFTEN

Wae Marsh Once Saved Small Boy From Drowning. Other Brave Acts

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Has your favorite playmaker star ever been a real heroine? Answer—"Yes!"

There are scores of heroic acts done on screen favorites which the camera never records and the public never knows of.

Because these are performed out of the picture, and among the few folk themselves.

All heroes will tell that it takes more all courage to do a brave deed in the quiet humdrum of everyday life than it does to the tune of music and shouting and the surety of public applause.

There are three who have done brave deeds "off stage."

Bonnie Sweet, one of the most dainty stars, was working in a picture recently at the Lasky ranch in the Hollywood foothills near here. Another girl, who is the picture, the actors look for a good location. She did not return, as Sweet insisted on going to look for it.

About that a recurring party found her girls at the bottom of a gulch where the scenario writer had been driven by her horse. Miss Sweet's young face and hands were torn and bruised, but she made the effort she had made to reach and assist her friend.

She is an all-around heroine. Last summer at Long Beach she saved a small boy from drowning. No one knew her identity till long after, and then only by chance was it learned.

She is also an everyday heroine. There is a big family of little Marshes, the major part of the popular girls who Miss Marsh spends her nights teaching the touches on her own education.

Mae Walscamp of the Universal, after a big scene in a picture called "The Terrible," produced at Sanger, featuring the breaking of a dam, actually leaped into the current to save Walscamp. She dragged him onto the bank and the plucky animal, after a stiff fight with the current, succeeded in swimming to safety.

Travelers' Aid Work

At the meeting of the Atlanta Woman's Missionary association, held July 14, reports from the agents of the Travelers' Aid work at the railroad stations showed that a total of 657 persons had received help during the month of June. Of this number 54 were directed to comfortable and safe lodging or boarding houses, 28 were sent to the Y. W. C. A., where they were made welcome, 5 were sent to Grady hospital and to the Volunteers of America were directed to 35.

At this meeting Mrs. Mansfield, who was the delegate to the recent National Sociological congress held in Houston, Tex., was present and reported on the meeting in behalf of the National Travelers' Aid work.

The organization has not yet been perfected, although Miss Dodge left $25,000 for that work when it is established. At present special attention is being given to the needs of travelers to the two great expositions, and when those close the national work will be pushed.

Mr. Baker, who is at the head of the work in California, is doing an immense work in this line. The name matron, for those in the employ of the association at the stations, will be discontinued and they will henceforth be known as Travelers' Aid agents, and will soon have the national badge to wear, that they may quickly and easily be recognized.

NEW ORLEANS, July 17.—Two, possibly three more changes, according to Manager Dobbs, are to be made in the Pelican lineup before the squad will get straightened away for the Southern league stretch. The contemplated shifts, unless Manager Jaw'n's plans go amiss, all probably come within another fortnight, perhaps after the first series at Chattanooga, July 27, is completed.

Former Dixie Players Branch Out as Pilots

Nearly Every League in Country Has One or More Managers Who Formerly Played in the Southern-Texas Leads With Six

MEMPHIS, July 17.—The Southern league has always been a liberal contributor of playing talent to the smaller leagues south of the Mason-Dixon line, but this season it would seem that the Southern has taken upon itself the task of furnishing managers to the various leagues in Dixie, and that they have more than made good can be attested by the fact that nearly every leading club of the smaller organizations of the south is piloted by a former Southern league player.

In the South Atlantic league, the Columbus club is out in front, and its leader is none other than Jim Fox, who will be recalled by Southern league fans as the elongated first baseman who spent a year with the Atlanta Braves in 1907. Fox was very popular with Southern league fans. Other S. A. pilots who formerly played in the Southern are Frank Manush, at Albany; Eddie Sabie, at Charleston; and George Strickland, at Macon.

In the Texas league Paul Senter's Galveston club is showing its heels to other members of that association, and of the eight teams in the league all but two are led by former Southern league players. Ducky Swann is at Beaumont; Joe Dunn at Dallas; Jacob Adams at Fort Worth; Sid Smith at Shreveport; and George Ledy at San Antonio.

In the Virginia state league the Rocky Mount club is out in front, and that club has as its leader Ray Ryan, who for several seasons was a catcher on the Birmingham club. Heinie Buea, one of the best fielding shortstops who ever played in the Southern, has charge of the Petersburg club of the same league.

In the Georgia-Alabama league, Harry "Smutter" Matthews, who has caught at different times for the New Orleans, Atlanta and Birmingham clubs, piloted the winning team in that little circuit. Matthews handled the destinies of the Newnan club, which won the flag.

With the exception of the North Carolina league, every minor organization in the south has a former Southern league player managing its leading team. The Southern cannot boast of many managers in the majors. In fact, George Stallings is about the only leader in the big time circuit who could be claimed by the Southern. Stallings managed several clubs in the old Southern league, and during his last season in the league, which was in 1910, the swarthy chieftain of the present world's champions landed a Southern league championship for the Nashville club.

In the class A organizations the Southern has furnished two leaders. Rhudy Hutwitt, who covered an infield position for the Chattanooga team, is the "main office" of the Columbus club of the American Association while one of the most recent players to break into the managerial end of the game is Harry and "Rowdy" Elliott, the old Birmingham and Nashville catcher, who has recently been appointed to handle the affairs of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League.

KNOLL PENNANT WINNER. Up in the Central League, Punch Knoll, who played with the Memphis and Nashville clubs, has given several pennants to the Nashville club of that league.

In the Western League Hamm Patterson and Joseph Clarke are former Southern league leaders handling their teams there. Patterson is at Wichita, while Clarke is at Sioux City.

The Central Association, a snug little circuit composed of towns in Iowa, has drawn heavily on the Southern for team leaders.

Dr. Jay Andrews, who played with New Fisher's Nashville team, is leading the Waterloo club; Frank Richards, who covered third base for Charlie Babb's Memphis team in 1907, is at the helm in Marshalltown; Harry Ray, former Nashville outfielder and one of the fastest runners the game ever produced, is at Mason City; Dick Robin, one-time Atlanta first baseman, is at Burlington; while George Manush, has charge at here by Charlie Babb, has charge at Clinton.

In the Northwestern League, Justin "Pug" Bennett played with the Atlanta and Nashville clubs for several seasons.

Away up in the Canadian League three of the six teams are piloted by players who at one time drew salaries from Southern League clubs.

"Southern" Bill Crystal's Hamilton club is leading the Canadian League race. "Doc" Reisinger, who was one of the first of the spit ball pitchers to break into the Southern, has charge of the London club, while Frank Shaugency, one-time Montgomery outfielder, is the chieftain of the Ottawa club.

Effort, according to the Pelican boss, will be made to induce the Cleveland club to send Wells to New Orleans in the event the backstop proves to the satisfaction of Somers-Barnard & Co. his arm is not a total wreck.

Manager Dobbs appeared surprised when informed the Cleveland club had signed Wells. At first he stated the backstop would probably be turned over to Mr. Somers American association enterprise for which he is unable to find a purchaser, but when told Dr. Voght and Bassler are alternating for the Spiders and O'Neill dividing the Indians' backstopping with Egan, the Pel boss stated he felt certain he could get Wells.

Dobbs and Wells are old friends. When the backstop first broke in the game he played under the Pelican boss at Nashville, and since that time has made a tour of the Class AA leagues. Last year he managed the Jersey City International League club, but was let out because of the retrenchment policy. It is also said he has a rather weak arm, but Dobbs believes he can get first hand information from Cleveland, and should it develop Phil is able to turn back ambitious base-runners, probabilities are Pelican fans will observe Bob Higgins getting the first rest of the season shortly.

NEW KING SALESMEN HAVE SUCCESSFUL WEEK

New Line-Up of Force Starts
Things Off With Lively
Rush

L. F. Hamilton, Jr., the new road man of F. W. King & Co., has already made a record for himself on his first week of work. He took over the territory formerly covered by W. H. Arnold. Mr. Arnold is now manager of the Atlanta branch of F. W. King & Co., and he states that Mr. Hamilton has, indeed, made a splendid showing.

Mr. Schmidt, the new city salesman of King company, not to be outdone, also made a reputation for himself during his first week. He held down the city trade in fine style and not only did he succeed in opening up several big new accounts.

"I am very much gratified, indeed, at the way business is moving along since I have been named manager of the Atlanta branch of King company," said Mr. Arnold. "All our salesmen are going out after business with enthusiasm, and what is more, they are getting it and getting it in generous quantities."

SINGER SAW FINE CROPS ON SOUTH GA. VISIT

H. L. Slinger, of the H. L. Slinger company, spent several days last week in south Georgia. "I went to spend one day and spent four," said Mr. Slinger. "I visited Columbus and Lumpkin. I made the trip from Lumpkin to Columbus, and back, and saw some of the best crops of everything as I have ever seen. They have planted a wide deal of corn and they have fine crops of peas, hay, sweet potatoes, watermelons, peaches, in fact, everything that you can raise on a farm."

In Stewart county in particular I was impressed with the wonderfully diversified farming that I saw on every hand. We encountered some very fine rice in this section. The people of this part of the state have in recent years made a great deal of money out of rice. Whereas a few years ago it would have been practically impossible to go through this country and not see rice, now one may skim along with all speed and pleasure."

THERE'S A REASON FOR SIMPSON'S LATE RETURN

T. L. Simpson, the new city salesman of Kelley Brothers company, continues to make good in his new position in splendid style. He came out early and works late. He declares, however, that his late return to headquarters is due to the fact that he visits a number of lady customers and finds it hard to tear himself away from such engaging company even to get back to headquarters and report the fine bunch of orders secured by him.

LEWIS COMMITTEE WAS VERY BUSY AT COLUMBUS

T. B. Lewis, of the Capital City Tobacco company, is back from Columbus, Ohio, where he attended the supreme council meeting of the U. C. T. and also having done much hard work on convention matters. "Our committee," said he, "passed on the amendments to our constitution; and the supreme council accepted our recommendations on 120 of these; and this we consider to be a very fine record indeed. The chairman of our committee, W. B. Emerson, of Des Moines, Iowa, was defeated for the supreme council seat by only eight votes. I think he will undoubtedly be elected to it in 1916. Fate, of New York, won this year. I had the honor of seconding the nomination of Brother Emerson for this position and was his assistant campaign manager. He headed the supreme council's jurisprudence committee."

MANY VARIETIES OF MONEY IN MEXICO

Archie Cone, Texas representative of the Stephen Putney Shoe company, was in the city last week, direct from the Mexican border. He says that several days ago he went over there for a few hours and was glad to get back, as there is more chaos and fighting scattered over the Mexican landscape than he could conceive of, and that it is no place for a peaceable shoe salesman. He declares that money is one of the most plentiful things in Mexico just now, that there are 67 varieties of it, and that different sections turn out all kinds of paper money, a new kind almost every week, and there will be plenty of money in Mexico until printing presses wear out.

"MERCHANTS' WEEK" TO DRAW BIG CROWD OF DIXIE RETAILERS

Big Luncheon at Piedmont Club Will Begin Entertainments—Merchants to Spend Time in Buying Fall Stocks

Tuesday, August 3, has been named as the date for the big reception and luncheon which will start off the festivities and the active busy doings of merchants' week here, from August 2 to August 7.

Monday, August 2, will be devoted to the reception of the visitors and seeing that they are properly looked after for the day during the week. Wednesday morning will be devoted, on the part of the merchants, to visiting the wholesale houses and manufacturing plants; and then Tuesday afternoon, from 5 to 7 o'clock, will come the great luncheon and reception at the Piedmont Driving club. The Piedmont Driving club has heretofore entertained the Dixie merchants on their visits here and has received loud praise for the way in which it looked after the guests.

The rest of the week will be devoted to entertainment by the Dixie wholesale and manufacturing firms and the visitors will have plenty of time to enjoy the good time and view the great array of fall goods that the wholesalers have assembled for their inspection and selection. It promises to be a time of delightful social intercourse and special entertainment occasions, and a time of profitable marketing for the retailers.

The Atlanta market each year attains wide and wider recognition among the retailers of the south as a place where the best goods at the best values can be found. Since the beginning of the war, the policy of all departments of trade has been to buy conservatively and sell liberally.

This fact, the Atlanta wholesalers are proud to say, they will go nowhere else called here they declare they are satisfied and that they will go nowhere else.

Every southern merchant is requested to make his arrangements now so that he can be here the first week in August, engaged in the gay doings that have been planned and participate in the accurate and scientific marketing that will be possible here this year, with a personal view of the stocks.

Travelers who were in the latter part of the week report from their territories large numbers of merchants come here the first week in August.

C. D. DICKINSON TELLS OF PROSPEROUS MISSISSIPPI

Back From Trip There, He Says All Crops Are Abundant

C. D. Dickinson, of Brown, Perryman & Greene company, returned last week from an extended trip through Mississippi. "I found all the territory I visited in a very prosperous condition. I had no idea that this country was such a fine section of the south. I had been accustomed to think Mississippi was a low, swampy country, but the section I visited reveals little of this. I saw some of the prettiest towns I have seen in a long while. Not large, but very pretty and well kept."

"I believe they have the best corn crop I have ever seen. In fact, all of their crops are good—corn, cotton, peaches, vegetables and everything else. It may be stated that the section I visited is not troubled with the boll weevil."

ATWOOD GETS MANY MATRIMONIAL INQUIRIES

H. J. Atwood, traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, reports that he has received many letters due to the news item which appeared in the Firing Line about him not long ago, stating that he had a new automobile, but no wife to share it with him. It is evident that a young man with an automobile is in great demand.

THOSE "SPORT" SHIRTS ARE THE RAGE AT ROBINSON'S

Those sport shirts and Palm Beach suits are still all the rage with the customers of the A. M. Robinson company. This firm has already sold immense quantities of these two articles, but the demand is still so heavy that notwithstanding their immense stocks they have to hustle to keep up with the needs of their patrons.

BEST WEEK AT MCCLURE'S SINCE CHRISTMAS

"The best week we have had since Christmas," is the comment of E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten-Cent company, on the present trade situation. The McClure company will remove the first of August to its new location on Whitehall, and are advertising removal bargains for retailers who are coming into the house or sending in their mail orders in large quantities.

COUNCIL 18 TO HOLD LIVELY SPELLING BEE

Will Seek Revenge on Fulton Council for Having Defeated Them Before

The regular monthly entertainment meeting of Atlanta Council No. 18, U. C. T., will be celebrated on next Saturday night, July 24, with a spelling bee. The members of Fulton Council 505 will be invited to be present and take part in the spelling bee. Council No. 18 is out for revenge due to the fact that they were defeated in the last spelling bee by Fulton Council.

In addition to the spelling bee, there will be vocal and instrumental music, refreshments, and a number of other special stunts have been prepared for the occasion. This bids fair to be one of the biggest and most enjoyable meetings that council 18 has ever held.

GIDEONS LEAVE MONDAY FOR NAT. CONVENTION

The Georgia delegation of Gideons will leave Monday morning for the national Gideon meeting. Among the delegates from Georgia will be the following: M. F. Allen, S. C. Atkins, W. H. Phelps, Will Hardin, C. H. Burgess.

Big plans have been made for the entertainment of the visiting Gideons at Des Moines. One of the features will be a big corn roast which will be something new to the delegates from the South, who are acquainted with barbecues but not with corn roasts.

A. F. Todd will lead the Gideons' meeting this afternoon at 3:30 in the parlors of the Ansley hotel. As it is the last meeting before the national convention it is expected that a large attendance will be on hand. All travel line men are urged to be present. Ladies are cordially welcome.

SHACKELFORD NAMED SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

H. D. Shackelford, of Atlanta council No. 18, has been named by the grand council, by special dispensation, to be the representative of this jurisdiction in all legislative measures whatsoever. This gives Mr. Shackelford authority to represent the grand council in the matter of the hotel inspection bill and the anti-tipping law now pending before the Georgia legislature. Mr. Shackelford has always been interested in legislative progress and has always been a leader in the fight that the U. C. T. has made for bettering the conditions of traveling men.

WHITE PROVISION CO. HAS MODEL SANITARY PLANT

Trip Through Plant Reveals Enterprise of Great Value to City and State

A visit through the packing plant of the White Provision company, makers of the well known "Cornfield" brand of products, reveals it to be an enterprise of surprising magnitude and one that is a genuine asset to the growth and progressiveness of Atlanta and Georgia.

That this is indeed true, may be gathered from the fact that the company's plant, which is situated in the midst of a twelve and a half acre tract, consists of a basement and three stories and contains 650,000 square feet of floor space, including 24,000 feet of overhead storage. The firm annually slaughters twenty-five thousand hogs and ten thousand cattle. The business of the firm exceeds $1,000,000 a year. The company during the past year received five hundred cart of live stock and has shipped out eight hundred and thirty-four cars of its products. Its hogs come mostly from Tennessee, whereas its cattle especially in recent years come largely from Georgia.

The company also is a large consumer of Atlanta-made goods in the way of boxes, cartons, cloth bags and tinware for the packing of lard and sausage products. It believes in patronizing home industries, and orders for supplies of this kind are placed with Atlanta firms whenever at all possible.

VISIT THROUGH PLANT.

A visit by the Firing Line representative to the plant last week, which was personally conducted by the general and company, showed a scientifically arranged plant from top to bottom. Its cleanliness and sanitation throughout is impressed upon one on every hand. There is a large room for lockers and shower baths for all of the men employed at the plant, and a spick and span condiment building. The basement serves for the curing department where the hams and bacon are placed in great vats to undergo the curing process. From this they are taken to the smoke rooms, where they are treated with hickory smoke, and then they are packed in white canvas bags or are sent out without additional covering direct to the trade, as desired by dealers.

On the first or main floor, is the slaughtering department and also a series of refrigerating rooms. The slaughtering floor has a capacity of about one hog per minute and about one hundred cattle per day. The hogs are passed through a machine which removes the hair, and they are then dressed and taken to the first cooling room where the animal heat is removed. Both the hogs and beef pass through this room into additional refrigerating rooms and are finally cut up, or quartered into various parts, and placed in the general warehouse storage room as fresh meats, or are taken to the curing department.

SAUSAGE DEPARTMENT.
The second floor is devoted to the sausage department and to the refining and packing of lard and also to the cooking and packing of boneless hams. The third floor constitutes the smoked meat department. On this floor also the bacon is sliced and packed. It is sliced by an electrically operated slicer. The slices are packed in one-pound boxes and these in turn in twelve-pound cartons.

The company maintains its own live plant, which has a capacity of fifty tons

Baske Whitman, of John Silver & Co., was back in his territory last week after a vacation at his old home at Nashville, Tennessee.

E. M. Cox, of the shipping department of the A. M. Robinson company, has been ill for two weeks and though he is somewhat better he is not yet able to be back at his desk.

Among the visitors and patrons of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company during the past week were Mr. Frye, Clarkville; Mr. Bell, Monroe; H. B. Barnett, Lovejoy; Dr. Cannon, Jonesboro; Dr. T. B. Bonner, Lavonia.

Claude Smith, of the A. M. Robinson company, was in Thursday and out again Friday to sell a bill of goods to a merchant with whom he had an engagement.

R. C. Jones, of John Silver & Co., is now in Alabama for the last time before the Merchants' week in August.

John F. Davis, of the dress goods department of the A. M. Robinson company, was a personal mail order for the largest amount of dry goods the firm has handled for a long time. Mr. Davis is being congratulated on the reception of the unusual bill.

E. L. Bledsoe, of Broxton, one of the most progressive merchants in this state, was a visitor at John Silver & Co.'s last week on a buying trip.

W. S. Jones, of the A. M. Robinson company, its water comes from its own artesian well, pumped by its own machinery. The company owns its own cars which are loaded from its own platform, and the ice which it makes, is used chiefly in icing these cars. The day the Firing Line representative called two cars were loading, one for Rome and the other for Savannah, Ga.

One of the features of the plant is the part devoted to the refining of lard. This is done altogether by the open kettle process. All the operations of the plant are so arranged that there is no waste. The hair of the hogs is dried and pressed and sold by the carload lots. So also the refuse is rendered into tallow and sold for fertilizer. The fertilizer plant adjoining the main building is entirely shut off therefrom. The tallow is rendered from the cattle and is also sold in carload lots and the hides of the cattle are cured and sold to tanneries. Among the conveniences possessed by the firm is the station of the Western Union Telegraph company, which is adjoining the company's plant. This has instant communication with all the southern states.

The officers of this company, which is considered one of the most progressive and intelligently directed in the entire state are W. H. White, Jr., president; W. L. Newborn, vice president; E. S. Papp, secretary, and F. C. Wilkerson, treasurer.

Miss Sara Varon, a popular and efficient member of the office force of the All Star Manufacturing company, is spending the week end with friends at Culloden, Ga. Miss Varon says that nowhere in Georgia can one have a larger time than at Culloden. She declares that the peaches thereabouts are the finest raised in the state.

E. S. Papp, secretary of the White Provision company, returned the latter part of this week from a pleasant vacation stay at Savannah, Ga., where he went by motor, accompanied by Mrs. Papp and little Harrie White.

A. L. Sylvester, president of the American Clear company, of New York, was a visitor last week at the Capital City Tobacco company. Mr. Sylvester states that Atlanta is one of the liveliest towns which he visits anywhere. His company manufactures Cancellor, Parex and many other famous brands of cigars.

R. H. Hill, the live wire city salesman of the White Provision company, was away on vacation during the past week.

J. F. Finger, of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, is spending his two weeks' vacation on a camp on top of one of the highest peaks in north Georgia. Mr. Finger is known as the "Mountain Wonder" of his firm, and so attached is he to the hillside region that he refuses to leave it even for a vacation.

Walker Bradford, popular road man of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, next week begins his vacation, which he will spend at his old home at Cedarvale, Ala.

C. J. Sullivan, of the M. C. Kiser company, made a special trip last week to south Georgia.

This Kind of Talk Has the Right Ring

Recently an Atlanta paper printed an editorial from which we select these same paragraphs:

"If every man in Atlanta bought everything he wore and everything he used in Atlanta; if every woman bought everything she wore in Atlanta--her clothes, every accessory of her toilet; if every child living in Atlanta had its clothes bought here; if every home in Atlanta were furnished throughout with the products of Atlanta shops; if all the foodstuffs consumed in Atlanta were bought in the Atlanta markets--

"THEN ATLANTA WOULD BE THE MOST PROSPEROUS CITY IN THE COUNTRY, EVEN IN WAR TIMES.

"What makes Atlanta prosperous makes every individual man prosperous. You make your money here, out of Atlanta people and Atlanta enterprise--then why does any man, woman or child feel called upon to buy anything outside of Atlanta?"

This is encouraging--tonic--sound!

But we need ACTION as well as sentiment.

This way, let's say, to make it plain:

The consumer gets the BUY-WHAT'S-MADE-IN-ATLANTA germ and goes to the grocery store or the dry goods store or the shoe store.

He calls for the ATLANTA brand.

Whereupon the dry-goods or the grocer or the shoe man, ups and announces that he doesn't "happen to have that particular brand--but here's something else just as good; in fact--"

WHY will some merchants stand in their own light that way?

Isn't it amazing?

Merchants of ATLANTA and GEORGIA, don't make the mistakes of withholding your co-operation in this Big movement for HOME-MADE GOODS. Don't block the game. Don't be short-sighted.

The advantage to the merchant in buying HOME-MANUFACTURED goods is very great. He gets the best end of it, decidedly.

The demand for our stuff is being built up every day through appeals both to the patriotism and the pocket-book of the consumer. The missionary work that is now doing is going to bring a big harvest of returns.

It will PAY you, Merchants, to be there with the goods when the going gets steady. And we are telling you cold facts when we announce that the said going is improving every day that comes.

We'd like to talk with any merchant who is of the doubting-Thomas order on this proposition. If you've got any questions to ask or if there's anything you'd like to be shown on the subject of BUYING-OUR-GOODS, let us hear from you.

A personal inspection of our factories will be, we believe, a revelation and a pleasure to you. Seeing is believing--and we're after converts.

Write us a letter or come to see us.

Making Art Of Atlanta's Alleys And Farms.

As I write, the spring is coming in Cambridge, and I cannot help thinking, with a little heartache, of how the spring came to meet us once as we rode southward from Venice to Florence on that road from Padua to Ferrara. It had been May for some time in Tuscany, and all through the wide plains of Veneto, this was the railroad landscape: Fields tilted and tended as jealously as gardens, and waving in wheat, oats and grass, with here and there the hay cut already, and here and there acres of Indian corn. Country roads, level, straight and white, stretch away on either hand, and the constant files of poplars escort them wherever they go. All about, the birds sing and the butterflies dance. The milkchits, often dragging the heavy carts turn up their patient heads, with white-spreading horns and mellow eyes, at the passing train. Even the matter-of-fact locomotive can along these plains of spring. That is what William Dean Howells wrote in his "Italian Journeys."

"Atlanta is the second largest mule market in the world; is the railroad center of the south; is the southern home office of nearly all insurance agencies operating in this section; is the real hustling, bustling business center of the southern states."

That is what impartial writers usually say of Atlanta.

The plains of spring in Tuscany would seem reason enough for art. But who would expect rarely-expressive etchings of the "second largest mule market in the world?"

A thousand pictures have been made of the Italian country of which Mr. Howells wrote—the land of tilled fields, of poppies, of stone farmhouses, of olive trees.

But to think of etchings with odd nooks of Atlanta as the subject? Why not a stretch of yellow meadows, or the countryside at dawn, when, as Mr. Coningsby Dawson says, the sky is "crimson with creating"?—Though an etching of the dawn might be something decidedly original.

Yet, Harry Osgood, of 18 Harralson avenue, well known among artists, has selected cool, quiet little alleysways and the Kimballville farm for some of his best work at etching.

His other efforts include paintings of fine, vivid color in Italy; and etchings in Venice, usually of the canals, giving that familiar effect of posts at the edge of the waterways and gondolas, with just one high pointed end showing.

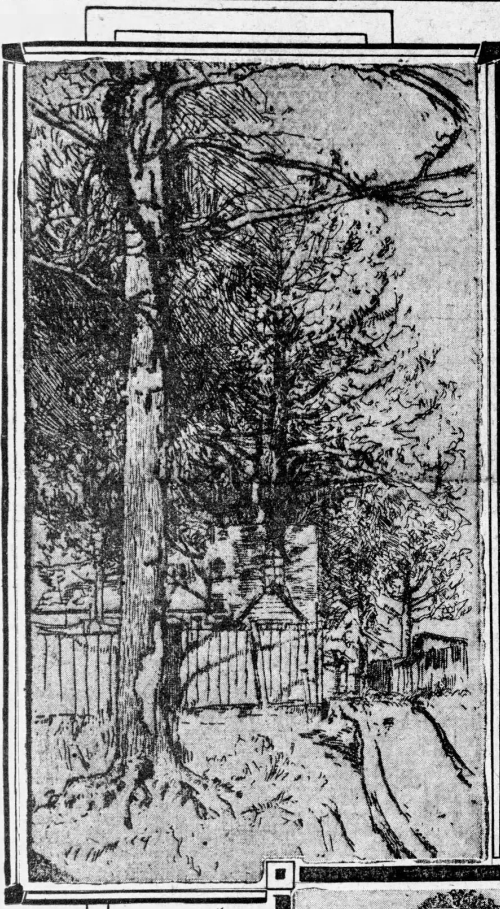

In Spain, he has painted the picturesque, both in people and scenes. In Paris, he has reproduced bits of life along the Seine; in London he has pictured the bridges and the boats of the Thames. But most interesting of all are his etchings made in Atlanta.

In this purely business city he has found the subjects for delightful studies in landscape effects. Unknown to all but a handful of people he has pictured a part of the city others have overlooked. He has seen the interesting, and not just the business aspect of Atlanta.

In Florida he found better subjects for color and for light, and work he did not many months ago in New York seemed to have a fresh inspiration. But the etchings in Atlanta possess a value that comes from a familiar and studied subject.

He has pictured byways here that are cool and drowsy, and have rattleback houses on both sides, but are devoid, it would seem, of picturesque or stimulating qualities. And, yet, his etchings of such spots are unusual. He has seen them as no one else has.

In his etchings of farmlands near Atlanta he has made Kimballville farm something of a work of art.

Atlanta Dobies; Not Atlanta Chickens

TWO Atlanta lassies summering at Wrightsville went to pay a bill last week for swimming lessons.

"It had all been very exciting," one wrote home. "The instructor was a Rumanian, and had a military mustache, and once served in the army."

"His smile was brilliant, and, since he talked little English, he was never disappointing. Wouldn't it be fine if all men talked very little English? Only then we wouldn't know which one not to fall in love with."

He had it all summer up—for the swimming lessons—ten dollars, two dollars. What in the world was that? We couldn't make it out. But we had to know, and we just made him talk English, even if he didn't know how.

"What do you reckon?" "Dobies" is Rumanian for "girl." According to his kind of talk, we're not Atlanta chickens, we're Atlanta dobies."

Are Toes Here Like Bandaged Feet of China?

IN Atlanta is a student of psychology who has been interested of late in a theory that the magnetic force radiated by the earth can be absorbed through the soles of the feet if only people will go barefooted awhile each day.

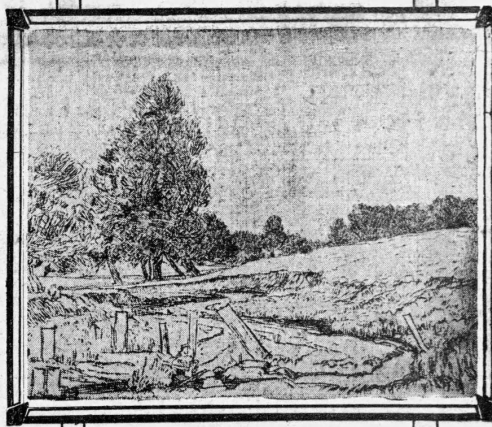

She attempted to form a "barefoot" society here, all members of which were to leave their comfortable beds at 5 o'clock each morning, and, for an hour, walk barefoot through dewy grass, or preferably, through clover.

"What the men said is unprintable," she confessed last week. "But what the women answered was merely interesting. They put it about this way:

"We can't go barefooted. Of course we like the idea of becoming magnetic. But we've been wearing tight shoes too long. Our toes are pinched trying to get that Cinderella effect. Feet in Atlanta are a little like the bandaged feet of China. We couldn't think of any health fads where we'd have to take our shoes off."

"This seems to be about the size of it," summed up the health experimenter. "If you've noticed, shoes in Atlanta are smaller than anywhere else. The result is, toes are a little more pinched here than in any other place."

THE ETCHINGS on this page are by Harry Osgood, of 18 Harralson avenue, probably the best-known artist in the south. For his subjects he has chosen here only Atlanta scenes—a quiet little street, two views of the Kimballville Farm, and a creek on the Sisson estate. He has seen Atlanta from a new viewpoint—not simply as a business city, but as a place that offers subjects for the artist.

Atlanta's Peanut Expert

FROM one business office here to another goes a man who has developed a peculiar specialty—peanuts. He can prepare them 100 different ways. He is Atlanta's best illustration of how ingenuity can tide one over in times of stint.

He doesn't wish his name given because he takes little pride in his new profession, though he very well might. He used to be a railroad engineer, a very good one, too; and he has a strong belief that a man's work is something physical and calling for brawn and a touch, at times, of heroic endeavor. But sickness in his household made it necessary for him to give up work that takes him from the city. He looked about him and decided Atlanta needed to be taught more ways of eating peanuts.

He belted them, parched them, roasted them, combined this method with that, thought up ways no one else had ever imagined, and now he carries with him a menu from which customers are to select their style of peanuts.

One Tree Worth $2,000

ABOUT twenty years ago Mr. H. A. McDonough was in business at Patterson when a friend sent him a small box of pecans, including a number of long-shaped nuts. Two of these he gave to a Mr. Sellers to plant as an experiment.

The nuts were planted in the yard near Mr. Sellers' dwelling. Both came up, but one grew faster than the other and produced heavy crops of the finest paper shell nuts in the country.

Mrs. Laura Sellers, who still owns the farm a few miles south of Patterson, was in Blackshear recently and said that she gathered 153 pounds of nuts from the best tree in 1913 and 120 pounds in 1914.

In 1913 she sold the nuts at $1 per pound, but reduced the price to 75 cents in 1914. She says that a Mr. Henderson, agent for a Florida nursery and Mr. O. V. Case, of the Wills Valley Nursery company, of Alabama, went out to see the tree, and told her she could get $2,000 for it for budding purposes. Mrs. Sellers gave as a reason for not entertaining an offer for the tree that she did not want to sell her place and the tree was near the corner of her house, besides the income from the nuts and the budding is considerable. Her son, Mr. G. T. Sellers, has become expert in budding and gets 75 cents for each bud from this tree that lives. In 1914 the income from this source was about $300 besides much budding was done on the place.—Blackshear (Ga.) Times.

HOW YOU CAN AVOID TYPHOID FEVER

THEY seem merely bowls of broth, left in the close, over-heated laboratory, where test tubes stand in racks and a doctor in a white apron busies himself over a microscopic slide. But really these dishes of thick, cruel are incubators for typhoid germs to be used in the prevention of typhoid fever. Each round bowl is producing germs, enough to give a hundred people typhoid. But their final use is to prevent sickness.

Vaccination with these germs grown by the state health department in its laboratory at the capital building and killed by slow heat, makes one immune to typhoid fever for three years. The vaccination consists of a series of three injections in which millions of "killed" germs are introduced into the body, usually through the arm.

Since 1912, the state health department has prepared 75,000 of these series of injections, and, of all those treated, only two afterward contracted typhoid. One became ill before the treatment was complete, and evidently had incubated typhoid when vaccination began.

The United States army has abolished typhoid by vaccination. In Europe, despite the enormous number of men at war, and the impossibility of complete sanitation, typhoid has been avoided, except in Serbia where vaccination against fever was not used. In the English, French, and German armies, fever has been prevented by vaccination with "killed" germs such as the state board of health grows on beef broth in the laboratory at the state capital.

All nurses and doctors at Grady hospital are vaccinated, and none has had typhoid, though all treat numbers of cases each summer. Both physicians at the Grady and at the state board of health urge vaccination for every one against typhoid.

"If I could only talk with the whole city," said Dr. W. B. Sumner, superintendent of Grady, last week, "I think I could persuade all Atlanta to be vaccinated."

"There can be no sound argument against such vaccination. It grants almost absolute immunity against typhoid, and causes no inconvenience, except, perhaps, a day's sickness, sometimes, not even that."

"People who are going away for a vacation in the mountains or to the seashore, should by all means be vaccinated against typhoid."

"In Atlanta where one has city water and there is sewerage, the danger of being taken with typhoid fever is not so great. But away from Atlanta where the sewerage is imperfect, where the water is from wells or even from springs, the danger is ever-present."

"Then, too, a typhoid convalescent is usually carried to the mountains or to the coast to regain his strength. In many instances such a patient is a perfect carrier of typhoid germs. Cases have been known where a person who once had typhoid fever remained an actual incubator for germs during twenty-five years."

"If you are going away from Atlanta, first of all be vaccinated. A great deal of the typhoid fever here is brought in by people who went to the mountains or coast for health's sake and returned ill with fever."

"Does typhoid vaccination lay one liable to other sickness?" he was asked. "The theory has been advanced," he said, "that such vaccination induces tuberculosis. But this is simply a theory. No sound argument can be advanced against typhoid vaccination."

The state board of health recently issued two bulletins in regard to typhoid prevention, in the first of which it said: "It is proper that people should be reminded every spring that they should be vaccinated early against typhoid fever, just the same as in December it is proper that they should be reminded to do their Christmas shopping early. We all know when Christmas is coming, but we can't tell what day typhoid fever may strike us. Therefore, be vaccinated early, before flies and fever make their appearance."

The state of Georgia furnishes the vaccine to its citizens free. Get your doctor to write to the state board of health for your dose, and do it now, for procrastination is the thief of time and may also be a robber of life. Three hypodermic injections are required at intervals of from five to ten days apart, and this confers immunity which is almost absolute for about three years. The dose is based on body weight, and not upon age.

"Here is what the United States government says about the value of this procedure: 'The conclusion is inevitable that the prophylactic vaccine as used in the army has given almost absolute protection against typhoid fever without producing untoward effects of any character—the vaccine is both efficient and harmless. All our soldiers are vaccinated against this fever every three years—the result, no typhoid in our army!'"

In another bulletin, the state board of health compared the number of soldiers who died of typhoid during the Spanish-American war to the immunity from typhoid enjoyed by the 20,000 men in camp for four months on the Mexican border. The reason is, American soldiers are now vaccinated for typhoid.

The method of vaccination, as explained at the state board of health last week, is this: A vaccine consisting of typhoid fever germs, grown in the state laboratory, then killed by a slow process of heating, is injected in three doses, the first containing 1000 million bacilli; the second, 2000 million bacilli; the third, 2000 million bacilli. These doses are given at intervals of six to seven days. The arm is made red at the place of vaccination, and the patient usually is sick for a day. This illness wears off in twenty-four hours.

There is a theory that the vaccination makes one liable to other sickness, particularly to consumption, but this theory is denied by surgeons of the United States army, and by nearly every state board of health.

Typhoid vaccination is considered less harmless and more effective than vaccination against smallpox. The effect of the injection of millions of dead typhoid germs into the system is simply to prepare the body against fever. A patient who has had typhoid is for the time being immune. This is because his body has prepared a defense against typhoid fever. The effect is the same when millions of dead typhoid germs are injected into the system.

The first fear is that vaccination may induce typhoid itself. That is impossible. Care must be taken, however, not to vaccinate one who has been exposed to typhoid. If fever should develop shortly after vaccination the effect would be a virulent sickness.

It takes about two years to develop a good polo pony. Only about three out of ten have enough "horse sense" to become good. The others are the "bone-heads" of the sport. That's one thing that makes the game so costly. A California poloist paid $1,250 for three ponies, fed and trained them for two years, found they wouldn't do, and sold them. He got $30 for the lot.

To teach ponies to turn quickly posts are driven into the ground about eight feet apart and the ponies driven in and around the posts at a canter. Some trainers use sacks of sand instead of posts and move the sacks closer together to compel sharper turns. The animals are taught to turn at the touch of a rein on the neck.

Care of ponies includes dental inspection every spring and fall. If a tooth has grown too long it is filed down. Long teeth prevent proper chewing of food and poor mastication, just as in the case of persons, causes indigestion.

The best ponies are secured from western ranches, where they have been used in roping cattle.

Polo ponies can be only an expense. A race horse can win big purses for his owner. Polo is absolutely amateur. Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, spent $20,000, and the Duke of Westminster, leader of polo in England, spent $60,000 preparing for the U. S.-English matches at Meadowbrook last year. All for a $4,000 trophy.

THE MAN WHO OWNS THE VIADUCT

By Angus Perkerson

THE "Man Who Owns the Viaduct" says:

"I got tired walking up and down the main street, so I stopped here, and here I've stayed."

"My number's 1-2 Whitehall."

"All I lack havin' a big fortune is money in the bank."

"I'll tell you one thing I've found out: the ugly people who pass here always wear the fine clothes. They have to."

"So many pretty faces go by I can't see 'em all; so, I just stopped lookin'."

"Everybody believes what I say, but I tell 'em they better watch me."

"When I started out I believed if I did the right thing the Lord would put me ahead of anybody in the cement business, and he did."

"I've stuck to my cement, and its stuck to me and to everything else."

CHUCKLING, pottering, grey-whiskered little man, hat pulled down, moving here and there, picking up scraps of paper, no one or another of his two dozen knives, peering out suddenly at the passing people from eyes that seem worn with long looking—that is the man "Who Owns the Viaduct."

Spools joined with cement are strung in festoons on the outer wall of the L. & N. building at the north end of the viaduct. Little amber bottles balance on copings meant for architectural effects and used as shelves.

Where the viaduct ends and an old lady stands holding a box of chewing gum, frowning bitterly at all who pass without buying, are home-made posters, telling of Marshall's London cement.

As a background to the bottles and the joined spools are two carefully-done plaques, one of the amber glue; the other of a hospital for dolls at 143 Marietta street.

The hospital is the home of the man who keeps the viaduct clean of all stray bits of trash and uses it as a place to sell the golden-tinted glue.

While dolls are made at the hospital by a younger sister, he conceals, with great mystery in a darkened room and all alone, the secret amber adhesive.

"Marshall's Cement" is the name of the mystery. R. H. D. Marshall, from Shelbyville, Ky., occupied from 1860 to 1864 in fighting for the southern confederacy, is the man who owns the viaduct.

He pushed back his hat and raised his face so that the seamed cheeks and the blue eyes showed. They were childish, twinkling eyes. But from one sleeve pushed out simply the brown stud of a wrist.

In the bloodiest fighting of the war, the little pottering, gossiping fellow lost his left hand. Peace returned, he came to Atlanta.

For years he watched the city grow, saw it change from village to town, saw the viaduct span the railroad tracks; and, as the bridge reached from bank to bank of the currents of steel that run many ways, some toward the sea, some inland, he flushed with an idea.

As one looks at him now, the blue eyes under the low-drawn hat seemed faded—worn, as it were, with so much looking at the crowds that pass and pass.

But in those old days they had a shrewd, a knowing twinkle. He was not the man to stare blindly at his opportunity.

He was a man to grasp and to hold, and the idea was his now. It was this: Why not use the viaduct as a shop for the amber glue?

On the box he uses for a chair, he leaned forward, last week, and the forefinger of his good hand tapped in mild emphasis on this chin.

"I had been walking up and down the main street," he confided, "and I decided I'd sit down and rest, and here I've rested. I clean off all the paper and the scraps of trash a dozen times a day I guess, so no one minds my staying."

"I guess I do feel like I pretty near own things 'round here. But I don't ever put myself in people's way. If I get too high they might put me down."

"I've always been too poor to advertise and I used to write signs on the sidewalk. But the police didn't seem to like that, so, I put them round here." He nodded toward the placards behind the bottles; toward the signs in the corner of the viaduct.

"I think everyone in town knows me, though I don't know them all. I used to try to learn the faces of the people who pass regularly. But I couldn't see them all; so I quitte looking."

"Once I have a customer," he said, "he's mine as long as he lives. Folks might backslide from the Lord, but they'll never backslide from my cement."

"I learned the secret of it years ago, and I believed then if I lived right the Lord would put me ahead of anybody in the cement business, and he did."

"He lifted a yellow bottle, and caressed with the fingers of his one hand."

"It will hold wood," he declared, "all the world ends. It's hard for me to study anything it won't stick. The only thing I can think of is amber."

"I used to sit here and watch the people go by and study them. But now I've got tired looking. I found that it's the ugly ones always dress best. They have to."

"Some faces, I'd watch for and still do; they seemed to cheer me. And, then, there were others always worried. Some people go by hurrying, always hurrying, as though they feared of gear men; together as you do chairs and broken bowls."

"Be a good thing, wouldn't it, if some doctor would find a cement for humans as good as mine is for chairs?"

"I think a lot of them that pass along here need mending. But they seem out of gear men in their thoughts than anything else."

"I wouldn't like to have a shop where I was shut in. I don't think I'd swap the viaduct for any other store in town."

"Yes," he said, "it's pretty nice to have the viaduct all for yourself."

"Home Sweet Home" Relic Goes to Dalton

HORSES WHO THINK---PRIZE POLO PONIES

The Cost of Polo

Ponies worth $2,000 to $15,000, each.

Average cost, from $500 to $5,000 for the best. Poloists own from 10 to 50 ponies each.

Salary of trainer, $4,000 a year.

Salary and maintenance of grooms (one groom to four ponies) $13 a week.

Cost to feed pony, 50 cents a day.

Harry Payne Whitney has spent $125,000 for ponies since 1908.

Horrors of Deadly Gas Told by Ga. Doctor

Hawkinsville Physician With Red Cross in Belgium Says That Death From Such Gas Is Like "Dry Land Drowning." Before Death Men Suffer For Days

"THERE are hundreds of wounded here. Some awful sights to see, some legless, some armless, some with half a face blown away."

In this fashion Dr. Frank Murray, of Hawkinsville, Ga., serving with the Red Cross in Belgium, has written to the Hawkinsville (Ga.) News.

"You cannot imagine the condition of many who are brought in," he continues. "There are also those suffering from gas poisoning. The suffering from this gas is awful. There is only one way of describing it, and that is a dry-land drowning. Non lie and gasp for breath for days and days and then die. It is the long suffering before death that makes it so bad."

"We have a great system of handling the wounded. I will try to give you an idea of how they are treated. I will say, for instance, a man (we will name him Smith) is wounded. He is first looked after by his regimental doctor. Very little is done there. Bleeding is stopped and a temporary bandage is put on. Smith is taken, by a stretcher bearer, to a collecting station, where, as its name implies, all wounded men of a regiment are collected."

"Here his bandage is looked at, adjusted, etc., and maybe he is given a little brandy, so he may be weak from the loss of blood. Smith is then put in an ambulance and carried to a field dressing station. There his wounds are carefully looked after. Amputation is done if necessary. Smith is then hurried away to a field hospital. This hospital has 100 beds."

"There the doctor decides what is to be done with Smith. If he thinks there is any chance for his recovery in a few days he will be kept there and soon returned to his regiment. If not, he is put in another ambulance and started on another journey. When he gets as far as the stationary hospital he is again examined by a doctor, and if he is able to continue the journey he is put on board a hospital train and carried to a general hospital. When he arrives there if the doctor thinks he will be able to get back into action, he is left on the train and carried to the coast and put on a hospital ship for England. This, of course, applies to the English soldiers.

"This may seem to take a lot of time, but the system is so complete that Smith may be wounded and land in a hospital in England in from 30 to 48 hours."

"I am at present in a hospital but will soon leave for a dressing station. Where I am now we can hear the guns very plain."

"I will have to ask your pardon for using a pencil. Pen and ink are out of the question here. I am lucky to have an indelible pencil. Although our letters are not censored, we are honor bound not to give out information that will be of value to anyone. This will explain why I cannot say where I am. We have a central postoffice (the G. P. O. London) that keeps a record of all, and our mail is forwarded from there to wherever we may be. Since leaving Hawkinsville I have seen Canada, Wales, Scotland, England, France, Ireland and Belgium. As I have been very busy since I have been here, I have not had time to do much sightseeing. I spent one week seeing England. Most of that time I spent in London. Of course London is dead now to what it would be in time of peace. No lights are allowed to burn at night, and the sky is a network of searchlights, looking out for the Zeppelins. As to conditions here, all one can see is soldiers. Since I have been here I have seen French, English, Belgian and German soldiers."

Some of Fate's Odd Pranks

A NEWSPAPER recently compiled a list of the odd accidents that happened in this country in one week, just by way of showing the strange things that can occur in the best regulated communities. The list took in the whole United States, but even at that it was startling in its magnitude and strangeness.

For instance, a fellow in Virginia accidentally shot himself with a revolver. When the surgeons arrived it was found that he had nearly amputated his appendix, which had been giving him trouble for some time, thereby saving himself an expensive surgical operation. A man on Long Island had two fingers broken while winding an old-fashioned clock, and a Pennsylvania man lost his life when a rooster pecked a wart upon his hand, he bled to death before the flow could be stopped.

An ink bottle overturned in a high school in Pennsylvania, and a boy was permanently blinded by the ink that splashed into his eyes. In New York a man laughed at a joke and dislocated his jaw.

In Maryland a woman stooped to pick up a purse when her false teeth came loose and in the effort to replace them they got into her throat and caused death before she could be relieved. A New Jersey woman, in hanging a curtain, slipped and her wedding ring caught upon a nail and the finger was torn off. A Colorado man sneezed so hard one night, while lying in bed, that his false teeth flew out. When he got up to recover them he stepped upon them and died from the wound made by the molar. A child strangled to death in Minnesota by getting its head through the rounds of a chair. One fellow out west lost his life by drowning in a bath tub. Numerous strange accidents with firearms were reported, and a clerk in a store in Baltimore fell through a show case and cut his throat.

But there is no occasion for going through the list. Enough things happened and were recorded to cause us to remember that a gentleman of experience once said, "In the midst of life we are in death," and there is no occasion to doubt it—Fort, Smith (Ark.) American.

Aunt Tyra McIntyre Is Dead

BELOVED by all who knew her for her beautiful traits of character, Aunt Tyra McIntyre, who died Tuesday, was laid to rest yesterday afternoon in Greenwood cemetery. The services were held in the Colored Baptist church and attended by a large number of white friends of the old negroess. So great was the esteem in which she was held that a choir composed of her white friends attended the services and solos were sung by Miss Fe Symons and Miss Janie Symons.

"Aunt Tyra" as she was familiarly known all over the city, was a slave of the Postell family on St. Simons and when she died she had passed the 75th milestone of her life, which was devoted to doing good for all in need, among both white and colored. Aunt Tyra was often called a good Samaritan for her many acts of abnegation. She was always ready for any summons, and what she did for the suffering and afflicted of her race will remain as a monument to her for decades to come.

Aunt Tyra was in the Postell family for years after she was freed, and this family mourns her loss as much as they would one of the immediate family. Two colored ministers of local churches officiated at the services and floral offerings were so numerous it was necessary to have a conveyance to carry them to her last resting place at Greenwood—Brunswick (Ga.) Seeing One's Double in Furs

KEEP COOL!

THEY are wearing furs in Atlanta this summer—heavy, white furs under a blazing July sun. They are wearing them in neck-pieces, as hat trimmings and on dresses. Mrs. Governor Nat Harris wore Atlanta's first fur-trimmed dress at the inauguration, and every stylish Peachtree maiden has cuddled her shoulders in pure fox skin.

The style started in Paris. Then it seized New York's fancy and became the rage. Now it has reached Atlanta, and already over two hundred sets of fox fur—see tabulated figures of Whitehall street merchants—have been sold here.

Why do they do it and how did it begin? The answer to the first question is simple: "Furs are the fashion." And the person who began it was as usual and of course, a woman.

To the average man the display of furs in the summer time is the acme of idiosyncrasy. One would sooner think of a still hunt for the North Pole in a bathing suit or William Jennings Bryan enjoying the Rhuviyat. Furs in the summer time; what folly! But then, Dame Fashion was ever a freakish old girl.

Mrs. E. W. Davidson, of 32 Penna avenue, wearing summer furs.

It all started because the wife of a Paris furrier wanted a pearl bracelet. This is stated on the good authority of a Whitehall street buyer, who got it from a New York modiste, who heard it in Paris herself.

This was last summer, right after the war started and when trade—especially the fur trade—was at a standstill in Europe and everywhere else. The wife of the furrier wanted the bracelet and she demanded the ready cash from her husband. The latter replied in French, "Fat chance! This war has put the blocks to the fur business; ask me, for something easy like a buffalo robe."

But the wife—who was really keen on that bracelet—conceived a plan, and because she did they are wearing furs in Atlanta this summer. From her husband's stock she selected a beautiful white fox skin and on a broiling August day appeared on the Champs Elysees of the Rue de la something or other, with the furs around her neck.

Paris swallowed the bait, hook and all. Here, indeed was something new. In two weeks fashionable folk were furred to a finish. Noted actresses took up the new, fad, society ladies paraded after it, everybody was doing it, the furriers sold everything they had; and the woman who began it all got her bracelet.

This story is, fact, on the word of a buyer.

Soon after the craze hit America, an Atlanta merchant went to New York. At a venture, he bought two sets of the summer furs. Returned to Georgia, he sold them the first day. He was surprised but happy. He received orders for furs as fast as he could fill them. Today his books show he has sold over fifty sets. And his experience has been that of many other local merchants.

From simple neck pieces with a fox head, the craze spread to other garments. Hats are now being trimmed with fur. Light summer dresses are adorned with fur fringes. When Mrs. Nat E. Harris wore at the inauguration a dress trimmed with fur—the first seen in Atlanta—she was in the height of fashion. And her example has been followed by women the state over.

"Aren't they terrifically hot?" the writer asked the merchant.

"I don't know," he replied. "I never wore one. But while most of them are pretty thick, nearly all are white and they hang loosely about the shoulders. And, of course no muffs

Poke Salad Explained to News By the Gazette

After Setting the News Man Right on Potlicker and Cracklin' Bread, Tifton Editor Takes Up Salad

WHAT is poke salad? asks the Macon News.

Poke salad probably no longer exists, but has disappeared with the many other domestic economies practiced just after the close of the war between the states.

Not long since we set the News man right on what constitutes real potlicker and cracklin' bread. Now we take pleasure in transferring to him what information is to hand concerning the salad in question.

It is not made by a rosy cheeked girl in a poke bonnet; it is not a combination of greens and relishes, juicy tomatoes and succulent onions; the poke salad was a poor man's dish and was a substitute for spring greens.

The poke-berry bush grows to considerable size during the summer and bears a red berry that, while it is sometimes used as dye, neither appeals to the nose nor the appetite. But when the tender buds of the poke-berry bush put out early in the spring they are edible and somewhat resemble young collards in taste.

A long time ago these buds were gathered and boiled with bacon and eaten as greens. They were not so very good but they were a substitute for young turnips because they broke the long winter fast.

There may be a few sections in which the poke salad is still gathered and eaten but we do not know of them. There is nothing about the salad as an article of diet to go into rhapsodies over.—Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

Valdosta Editor On Gardens and Chickens

THE people of Valdosta who are raising chickens and who have no place to keep them are coming in for some rather harsh criticism from their neighbors these days. It is almost impossible to go in a crowd of men or women without the subject turning upon chickens, and nearly always the neighbors' chickens.

About half of the people in Valdosta are cranks on the subject of gardens and flower yards, and the other half are cranks on the subject of chickens. It would be a happy combination if the folks who raise chickens would keep them at home, for in that case the vegetable growers would be able to send them vegetables once in a while. As it is, however, the chickens scratch up young vegetables, and often the seeds themselves before they have a chance to mature. People who raise chickens ought first to provide a place in which to keep them. The city council ought to take cognizance of this important matter.—Valdosta Times.

The DIAMOND from the SKY

by ROY L. MCGARDELL

ESTHER SEEKS REFUGE IN the SANITARIUM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud engendered over lootings, "the diamond from the sky," found in a meteor by an ancestor, has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley estate in England may come to an American family. When his wife died after giving birth to a daughter, Col. Stanley gave and substituted as heir a new-born gypsy boy. Three years later the gypsy mother, Hagar, stole the orphan's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtained possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, Esther Stanley, grows up, Hagar returns with her to Stanley hall. Dr. Lee, existing as a condition that he keep the "diamond from the sky," admits Esther, in hopes that the supposed Arthur Stanley II, who is Hagar's son, will marry Esther and become master of Stanley hall. Blair Stanley, Arthur's cousin, who would be the claimant to the estate if the truth were known, also falls in love with Esther.

In endeavoring to "lead the diamond from the sky," from Dr. Lee, Blair causes the old doctor's death. Arthur assumes the name of the murder in the hope that he himself will escape and Blair, who is a prodigy, will live a straight life. Hagar and Esther are established in Stanley hall after great evidence, Blair in the meantime has fallen in love with Vivian Marston, an adventuress, and, disguised and in possession of the "diamond from the sky," elopes with her, although the marriage ceremony was never completed. Blair, seeing that Esther is the real heir, plans to make friends with her and effect a marriage between her and Blair Stanley, Jr., disguised son. She reasons that if Esther marries Blair, Hagar would withhold any accusations or proofs of his guilt in connection with the murder of Dr. Lee. Esther in the meantime has effected Hagar's strong box and found proof that she, Esther, is the real heir. She resolves to say nothing about it. At Mrs. Stanley's request, Blair and Hagar accompany her to Mrs. Randolph's in Richmond. Burglars loot the train on which Blair and Vivian are riding and take from the "diamond from the sky." Vivian, enraged, accuses Blair and threatens him with exposure unless he returns the diamond. And of the diamond itself? The robber who carried it was killed and the horse which he rode fell upon the treasure and covered it up so that it eluded the eyes of the police. A month later Arthur Stanley, or "John Powell," finds it.

Blair returns to Richmond, and, dodging Esther, agrees to her in order to avenge the jealousy of Vivian. Hagar's mind, affected by an accident in the gypsy camp, wanders and Esther learns that he stole her to normal condition an operation costing $1,000 will be necessary. Mrs. Stanley offers Esther the money on condition that she will marry Blair. Esther refuses. Arthur, having possession of the "diamond from the sky," announces a fortune in the California oil fields, and Esther decides to seek out Arthur and tell him all.

"TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER."

CHAPTER XII.

THE impulses of youth are generous. Not for himself alone did he who had been known as Arthur Stanley of Stanley Hall, Virginia, dream his dreams of wealth and power, as "John Powell," California millionaire to be. True, the factor of vanity, especially strong when life is young, actuated him in part. He had left the proud, old countryside of Fairfax, where, as master of Stanley Hall, he had been an aristocrat of aristocrats, a fugitive accused of murder. He had felt no shame at this, for he knew his own innocence and knew it could be proved. But the deeper shame that had driven him to this desperate course, was the shame at the thought that his life had been a living lie. He was not a Stanley of Stanley Hall, proud heir of an English earldom and he had left it bankrupt. He had stood and he still stood usurping Blair's heirship to all that shone in life.

It was perhaps vanity, and a natural one, that inspired Arthur's resolve to return to Virginia rich in his own right, tell the truth, the whole truth, and spare Blair from the consequences of being responsible for the death of Dr. Lee. For Blair had assured him this had been the effect of sudden excitement on an old man's weakened heart, when the kind but irascible doctor, alone with Blair in his study, had quarreled with the younger man over the diamond from the sky.

The impulses of youth are generous. Laying aside even his plans for his future realization of power and justification, Arthur's first thought was to employ the means he had at hand in the finding of the train robbers' stolen plunder, to aid Esther and his gypsy mother, bitter and cruel as the latter had been to him. Then he would say Stanley hall, the proud old place his prodigality had imperiled, from the hands of strangers.

Whom should he employ as his trusted agent in these matters? He thought of the tactful and inscrutable Tom Blake, the Richmond detective. Arthur remembered vividly how, at a look from Hagar, Blake had deftly aided him in escaping from the sheriff of Fairfax and the police of Richmond in the exciting encounter at Mrs. Randolph's hall.

Arthur resolved to trust Blake. Reaching Los Angeles with the outlaw loot, the first thing Arthur did was to wire the Richmond detective in a guarded message. He received a reply in a few hours, which read:

"Know you are all right. Will act for you in confidence. Trust me fully."

Then it was that Arthur wired ample funds and instructed Blake to secretly guarantee all expenses for Hagar's treatment at the sanitarium, irrespective of what Mrs. Stanley might do. For Arthur had all particulars in brief by wire from Blake. From Blake he also learned that Esther was seemingly in good hands with Mrs. Stanley at Mrs. Randolph's mansion in Richmond, and from the same source he learned that Stanley hall, in the due course of the bankruptcy proceedings against the missing Arthur Stanley, was to be sold to the highest bidder. Of the money, some hundred thousand dollars, he had found under the skeleton of the horse in the desert. Arthur placed $20,000 by wire at the disposal of Blake in Richmond with instructions to bid in Stanley hall at all hazards, and if more money were necessary, more would be forthcoming.

He could save Stanley hall from strangers and aid Esther and his gypsy mother, both penniless and on the bounty of strangers, since Hagar, in her mental insanity, had been told that none knew Blair had died, he had no means of telling where her supposed wealth was hidden. But it was a bitter thought to Arthur that even in this he was using means not rightfully his. As the spendthrift heir of Stanley hall he had unwittingly been an importer and a cheat. And now, even in secretly coming to the rescue to save Stanley hall from strangers or to aid Esther and Hagar, he was using stolen money. An awakening to higher ideals had come to Arthur, and these reflections were bitter ones. He hoped good might come out of evil and resolved to make every effort to find his own fortune and refund with interest.

With Esther the impulses of her fair youth, were strong mightier than Arthur's, were they loving and self-sacrificing. She knew she was rightful heir of Stanley hall, even though by accident of sex no titled honors abroad could come to her. But her birthright was a proud heritage. Yet for the sake of Arthur, a fugitive, and Hagar, a crazed gypsy woman, who had done her a wrong in permitting Arthur to dwell as master at Stanley hall, while she, the true Stanley, was reared among the rude Romany, she would keep silent. The tender heart of Esther was permeated only with loving kindness for the afflicted Hagar, and the reckless, handsome gypsy son who had masqueraded as master of Stanley hall.

Except for the humble help of the poor hunchback, Quabba, Esther was now alone surrounded by cold hearted schemers, save perhaps the light trained and frolicsome society leader, Mrs. Randolph. So when the persecutions of the returned ne'er-do-well, Blair Stanley, had become unbearable, and when his austere mother dropped the mask of kindness and held over Esther's head the threat regarding Hagar, Esther had fled. She fled with Quabba seeking Arthur, hoping, trusting, believing Arthur would be her help and refuge. For his sake she kept silent, though she had proofs hidden at Stanley hall of who and what she was—Esther Stanley, not Harding. No daughter of a mad, dependent gypsy woman was she.

So Esther's impulses, loving and self-sacrificing, led her first to where Hagar was. It was late on the night of her flight when Esther arrived at the private sanitarium. A long cloak concealed the plain attire in which she had clambered down the vines in the moonlight from her room in the Randolph mansion and joined the faithful Quabba waiting below. Outside the sanitarium she handed to Quabba the gypsy headress she had donned for her flight, and while Quabba lurked at a distance, she rang the bell at the door of the sanitarium and was admitted.

In her cloak, with her curls about her head, she entered the sanitarium, the attendant simply the Miss Harding, he knew as visiting the well known society leader of Richmond, Mrs. Randolph, and whose mother was under treatment for mental trouble here.

"I am called suddenly from Richmond," Esther explained to the house surgeon. "You will pardon the lateness of my call, but I want to see my mother ere I leave the city."

At first the head of the institution made polite efforts to deny her request. But he was not proof against the agitated Esther's pathetic appeals.

"Under ordinary circumstances," Miss Harding, said the house surgeon, "I could not let you see a patient at this hour. But I have good news for you. Your mother shows signs of improvement, and if you do not excite her it may do no harm to let you see her. I can also let out a hope—mind, I do not promise this—that in time, with rest and quiet, she will completely recover, and an operation will not be necessary."

So kind was his manner that Esther could no longer restrain herself. She briefly told the surgeon that conditions were such she was compelled to remove herself from being under further obligations to Mrs. Stanley and the latter's relative, the more kindly Mrs. Randolph.

"I am going to seek a friend," said Esther, "a friend who has every reason to assume all responsibilities for all charges the treatment of my mother incurs. I also pledge myself personally to this. Will you see, even if Mrs. Stanley withdraws her aid, that my mother is not taken from here, that she will continue to receive the benefit of the treatment, which will, as you believe and I truly hope, restore her reason?"

The head surgeon regarded Esther with a look of earnest sympathy.

"Set your mind at ease, Miss Harding," he said quietly. "I am not at liberty to give even the name of the agent of this unknown friend, has guaranteed all financial responsibility for your mother's expenses and treatment here. I am authorized to return to Mrs. Stanley what she has paid out for your mother. Besides this, were it otherwise, the case is so interesting and has responded so well to treatment without operation that we would be inclined to consider it worthy of our attention without recompense."

It was with a glad heart Esther received this cheering information, and it was with an even gladder one she beheld Hagar and not a gleam of recognition in those eyes so long vacant and unresponsive.

"Yes, dear," Hagar had murmured when Esther had folded her in her arms. "I know who you are, but I just cannot remember now. Maybe tomorrow I will remember. They took my boy away, they put a great jewel on his breast. I remember that, and then I remember you came and were my baby in his place. I will remember tomorrow. I am tired now, but kiss me, dear child, for I see by your eyes you love me and I will remember tomorrow."

"She will not remember you tomorrow," whispered the kindly house surgeon as he led the weeping Esther away. "It may be many months before she remembers you. Her recovery will be slow, but I feel it will be complete."

So it was with a hopeful heart and feeling resolute for her adventuring in search of Arthur that Esther bid adieu to the kindly head of the sanitarium and rejoined the hunchback, the latter carrying the sleeping monkey and a small bundle of Esther's hastily packed belongings, took their way into the country lanes, while on them gleamed the light of the myriads of diamonds in the sky.

She was happy. She felt sure that Arthur prospered in far California and was the unknown friend.

Esther had only known that with the clouding of Hagar's mind after her visit to the house of Mrs. Stanley in Fairfax, no trace of any wealth or means that Hagar supposedly had been possessed of could be found. Save for a modest sum of money on her person when she returned to Stanley hall, Hagar, it was ascertained, had no further clue that could be found.

In the sudden journey taken to Richmond and in the events that followed after Hagar had been placed in the sanitarium and Blair had returned to persecute Esther, abetted by his mother, Esther had kept no heed of the conditions that so vitally affected Stanley hall. Hagar had left it, but the property, ruined by Arthur's profligacy, was to be sold in bankruptcy proceedings.

Esther had not been aware that this impending. The morning following her flight, however, Mrs. Stanley received from Fairfax a letter from the referee in bankruptcy informing her, as a party concerned, of the scheduled sale of Stanley hall within a few days. As a party concerned, Lawyer Smythe, representing the English Stanley, received a like notice as he was on the point of departing to England, disgusted with America in general and the erratic and, as he thought, criminal "Yankee" Stanley in particular. But he deemed his duty called him to the sale.

When Mrs. Randolph's maid announced that Esther's room was in disorder, her bed not slept in, and that Esther was gone, Blair promptly had an attack of nerves, while Blair raged and fumed. Mrs. Stanley alone remained cool in the face of this surprising news.

"She has no friends and no money," said Mrs. Stanley calmly; "she will not go far. We will find her back here or with her gypsy friends before long. I dare say."

"The next thing," continued Mrs. Stanley, "is to run down to Fairfax for this sale. I know of no one in Fairfax with go for a long and I shall buy it."

All Fairfax turned out at the auction sale of Stanley hall. The old aristocrats came to sash over the vanishing glory of the old regime. But to the poor whites and the careless colored population it was a fête day and a free picnic. Dog fights and the presence of the eccentric English lawyer, Marmaduke Smythe, enlivened the proceedings.

As no purchaser of the whole had come forward, the auctioneer was prepared to sell the historic and proud old place and all the fine old furnishings it contained, in separate lots. Pictures, ornaments, rugs had been brought out upon the broad piazza to make the auctioneer's work the easier. Among all these furnishings and objects, nothing so took the eye of the English lawyer as a fine mounted deer head that he was informed had been at Stanley hall for over a century. In fact, none knew how old it was. To the lawyer alone to return to insular England from the wilds of America, nothing appealed so much as this. He resolved to purchase the deer head and take it to England as a trophy of good hunting in "the jungles of Virginia." At his request it was put up as first thing to be sold, and he bought it. The jokes and mockery of the crowd, and, as Marmaduke Smythe, beyond endurance, and, taking his purchase, he mounted his horse and awkwardly bore it away.

He had hardly gone when Detective Blake arrived, driven over from the Fairfax police station, in quest of the stolen earrings by Blair Stanley and his mother and the agitated-for every little thing upset her, and she would tell you—Mrs. Randolph, Blake asked that the house and the furnishings be offered as a whole, and tendered an opening bid of $2,000. Mrs. Stanley drew her thin lips together and Blair nervously lashed himself to a suppressed and muffled groan. The Stanley boys had not expected competitive bidding. Blake admitted acting for an unnamed client.

Neither Blair nor his mother dared openly affront the interloper, as they deemed him. But they did desperately to the limit of their resources only to see Stanley hall and all its furnishings, save the deer head already purchased by the English lawyer, go for $20,000 to Thomas Blake, the imperious agent of the unknown high bidder. They dared not vent their cold anger upon the smiling and triumphant Blake, but the words turned with a torrent of bitter, contemptuous gibes upon poor Mrs. Randolph, who happened to remark that her poor nerves were shattered and that she would never be in consequence, Blair and his mother went to their house in Fairfax and did not return with Mrs. Randolph to Richmond.

Esther reached the gypsy rendezvous and, not knowing of the sale of Stanley hall, the gypsies received her with wild delight, but she only stayed with these sincere though humble friends long enough to make another unavailing search for Hagar's missing hoard.

Meanwhile, what of the diamond from the sky?

It gleamed upon the breast of a papoose nursed by the stolid mother, in the glare of the California sunshine, outside an adobe hut. Luke Lovell, it is fated, is to see and gain again the diamond from the sky. He has taken up with associates as bad as himself and has become a "boot-legger," or illicit whisky peddler. With his associates he has passed by the desert Indians' hut and sees the diamond the aqua has found gleaming in the sunlight, and has possessed it. It is only a bit of glass and tin in the mind of the sodden, drink craving Indian father. Dejected the angry protest of the wife, the spite whisky of the eager white man.

And so the diamond moves on again. Santa Barbara, on the sea coast, resort for rich tourists, is not far away, and thither Luke Lovell and his crony beat it, seeking a purchaser able to buy this gem of fate.

With Arthur Stanley that was, who is "John Powell," how far is it? How have his fortunes, fortunes to be founded on stolen means, prospered? Not well. Arthur has fallen into the outlaw plunder in the Good Hope wells. The Good Hope wells have been a joke of these old stables in a crook once he has passed by them, who, when he was a ruthless young investor?

"John Powell" has played with high stakes in a crook once he has passed by them, who, when he was a ruthless young investor and finds him in the shanty that is the office of the Good Hope wells.

"I am sorry, boss," says Jack, "but I'll tell you something. There is oil in the Good Hope. We've struck every indicator. If you only had money to drill deeper, the oil is there. That money you sent ear would save you!"

"It's too late now, Jack, that money saved something more to me than these wells."

"I'm from Pennsylvania," says Wilson. "I believe if we torpedoes the big well we'd start the oil. I know it runs a well. The oil doesn't start and already the shysters are coming to take the property away from you because we didn't strike oil and the last payment is due. So let's do something desperate, boss, let's torpedoes the big well!"

"John Powell" is desperate and he agrees. The man of law representing the unpaid owners, hears of the plan and argues with an injunction. But the desperate "John Powell" defies law, as when he was known as Arthur Stanley he defied all order. The lawyer is held back wading the "scrap of paper," the injunction. The nitro-glycerin charged torpedo is lowered to the bottom of the well, the heavy iron detonator is dropped, and all run for their lives. A throb shakes the earth and the derrick rocks. Then arises a geyser of mud and a spuming fountain of roaring oil and gas!

The big Good Hope well has "come in" a gusher! "John Powell" is a millionaire!

No such gusher has ever been known in those fields, as the long dry and long despised Good Hope becomes. No oil millionaire gets rich so quickly a popular favorite. "John Powell," his associates, Jack Wilson wearing impressively his first dress suit, give him "the swellest banquet with cabaret trimmings" that Los Angeles leading restaurant has ever known.

Vivian Marston dines with an elderly admirer at this same restaurant the night of the banquet.

"John Powell's" associates toast and praise him for his bold resolution that snatched victory from defeat, and ever Vivian's dark eyes are on the dashing and handsome field oil magnate. Her elderly admirer testily endures the past of jealousy. But it is not love or sudden infatuation that draws the dark eyes of Vivian Marston to the young millionaire at the head of his feastal board. What has she seen in this lauded young favorite of fortune before?

"John Powell's" secretary enters deferentially with a telegram. It has come to the offices of the Good Hope Oil company and it reads: "The oil is in! Important brings it to the feast. Arthur opens it and reads:

"Esther Harding departed parts unknown. Hagar Harding better. Bought Stanley Hall for $20,000 you know. Will keep everything quiet. BLAKE"

Esther departed for parts unknown! Arthur crumpled the telegram in his nervous grasp. Mechanically he turned the friends that honor "John Powell" chant joyfully. "For he's a jolly good fellow!" As she dazed, he rises and departs with his baggage, his associates, and in hardly a moment the dark eyes of a luxurious woman fastened upon him. He bows as he passes, but he has no recollection of who the bold and beautiful woman who smiles at him may be.

Walled by the green high hills and the grass and higher mountains, the back beautiful Santa Barbara slopes down to the sea. The fronds of stately palms wave in the mild evening breeze. The view is only a few feet from the sea, the emerald green of fair lawns beautify the scene below. Fair as the gardens of the Lord seems the view, the panorama as of paradise, and his fellow bootlegger as they stand upon the hill near the old mission and gaze upon a panorama as of paradise below them. Far off at anchor on the apple waters of the bay a great white yacht runs like a swan upon the tide.

"A guy rich enough to own a ship like that can afford to buy the diamond from the sky," growls Luke Lovell. An inky black smoke dusts the plot down the hill that night they will a rowboat at the water's edge and Luke Lovell pulls upon the oars and the boat goes over the water. Far off at anchor on the apple waters of the bay a great white yacht runs like a swan upon the tide.

But the evil men do who fall beneath the great Jew's half-brother's wrath. Luke and Luke's companion rises stealthily at end of the boat and strikes him down. There is a hoarse cry in the night, a shout of "Paddy!" and the boat goes over, a drowning man gasps in agony, and the diamond from the sky is sinking in the deep, cold waters of the bay.

JUDGE JOHNSTON'S POLICE MATRILEE

By Ward Greene
Roscoe's Dream

Wuth er milyun dollars, gotter di'mon rize. Motorcars an' aide meat, boose an' eberything. Life an' jest er barrel fuller chocolate dreams. All de world look good ter me—in mah dreams.

—Darktown Lullaby.

"HIT wuz jest er dream, judge," murmured Roscoe Rake, and smiled faintly, foolishly, as if fond memories drifted to him through the hostile atmosphere of the police court.

"Hit wuz jest er dream," he breathed again softly. And sighed.

The officer hitched at his belt, cleared his throat and looked Roscoe over. "Well, your honor," he began, "if that was a dream, don't call me when this nigger has nightmares. He ran out of the house yelling: 'Buckhead, Buckhead!' with all his might. A telephone post was all that stopped him, and when I tried to arrest him he jerked away and yelled, 'Boss, I gotter license.' That was when I hit him."

"What was the matter, Roscoe?" inquired the recorder. "Did you think you were a locker club?"

Roscoe, who retained a faraway look on his countenance during the policeman's recital, started violently into consciousness. Then he explained. "Judge, I dreamt er white gem'mun come up ter me kivered wid di'mon's. He say, 'Mister Rake, I gotter li'l present fo' you heah.' An' he show me er fine lookin' mobile. So I clim right an' shoot in de juice. Dat wuz some dream, judge! Time dis policeman 'rest me I wuz runnin' er jitney bus ter Buckhead an' mokin' two hun'erd dollars er trip."

As they took Roscoe away to the stockade, his lips moved and his eyes were glassy. Involuntarily, a sentence escaped him: "Mek haste, nigger. I kaint hold, disheah jitney fo' you all day!"

Rivals

Come er left! come er right! come er rag an' shawl! Come to yo' honey-bunch straight down de hall! Up town'd de front do', back toward de wall, Gimme room to scramble at de Potlicker Ball!

—After Dark.

"WHAT'S this?" demanded the judge fiercely. "Another Potlicker row? I'm going to have to do something about you folks. You're always in hot water."

The defendants—a weird assortment of the youth and beauty of the Black Belt, their finery somewhat damaged after a night behind the bars—shifted uneasily on their respective Number Nines. A cross-eyed mulatto had the courage to speak, albeit a trifle morosely.

"Us ain't in no hot water, judge," she drawled. "Us ain't been doin' nothin' but dancin'."

"What's your name, girl?" inquired the clerk.

He was answered by Frogey, who celebrated his latest release from gaol by attending the Potlicker Ball. "Dat's Three-Finger Fanny," stated Frogey in a voice of authority. "She done start de hull rucus."

Three-Finger Fanny bridled. Before she could open her mouth, Frogey plucked into the tale: "Ef it hadn't er been fo' dat three-fingered, cross-eyed, blistered-footed gal we'd er been dar dancin' yit. But she an' Bugabear spill de beans. She come up ter me an' say, 'Mist' Frogey, kin you hall de jack?' I tell her she don't see no chains on me, do she? An' we whirl right in. Hoccome I knowed shis promise dat dance ter Bugabear? We ain't hall de jack twice 'round' fo' heah he come wid er beer bottle shoutin' dat I done tuk his gal erway. I see bleeched ter fend mahsef, ain't I, judge? Well den!"

The conclusion of Frogey's story lacked climax, but apparently the judge got the gist of it, for he said: "It seems to me all of you dancers need a summer vacation. They say there's nothing like a little arm work to improve the grip. Thirty days, everybody."

News From the Front

Li'l draps er wildcat, li'l grains er snow, Mek er peaceat nigger think he owns de show.

—Darktown Mother Goose.

SANDY FINCH ran into a snow-storm in Dibble's Drift and thawed out in jail. Snow-storms are not uncommon in Darktown, even in July, this being the technical term for a little bout with the hooch.

Sandy's snow affected him in weird ways. Ordinarily a peaceful non-combatant, he bristled into a son of Mars under the soothing influence of a sniff of powder. Like a Harry Clay Blaney hero, he didn't belong to the regulars, he was only a volunteer, but he made the mistake of volunteering a sortie on the Dirty Dozen. This was unwise, for the Dozen was never neutral.

The judge asked Sandy how it happened.

Sandy scratched his head reflectively. "Dat's whut I want'er know, judge," he remarked in puzzled inquiry. "Las' thing I recollect wuz me an' Snowball sittin' us some weapons ter fight de Germanies wid. Some way an'ur I ditch dat Snowball an' sot out fo' Pittsburg all by mahsef. I musser got dar, fo' de nex' thing I member wuz er nigger in de cell axin' me fo' de loab ob er match."

"We found him, your honor," said the officer. "Running away from Hell's Half Acre a mile a minute. Bumps on his head showed he had been rocked. But he was going fast enough to pass brickbats when we stopped him."

"Sandy," said the recorder, "I don't believe they raised you to be a soldier. And as the pick is mightier than the sword, we'll call it eleven days."

—Songs of Summer.

THE policeman was quite ruffled when he steered Messrs. Johnson and Jenkins to the fore in recorder's court. He kept both hands on their shoulders and at every movement of his prisoners started convulsively.

"I'm afraid of them," he told the recorder. "I think they're crazy. One of them howled all night like a wolf and the other doubled up and rolled around his cell. They are dangerous."

The prisoners whimpered piteously but shook their heads at the allegations. "I ain't crazy, judge," moaned Johnson. "Jest sick. I gotter stummacake."

"A what?" asked the recorder. "A stummacake," repeated Johnson. "So he," indicating Jenkins with his thumb. "Dat's hoccume dey 'rest us. Dey say we done stole some watermelons fum Mis' Lucy's sto'. Dat ain't so, judge, but when dey cotched us be him de fence wid dem Sugarloafs dey 'clare we git 'em fum Mis' Lucy."

"Well," remarked the recorder, after he had received enough evidence to convict six times over, "that's the first time I ever heard of a nigger getting sick on watermelons."

But Mister Johnson explained. "I reckon hit warn't jest dem melons, judge," he said slowly. "We done er snack befo' we git 'em. Whut dat—O, fo', five bottles soda pop, couple milk shakes, er hot dawg an' some 'silmon beer."

A FASHIONABLE young lady visited a cooking school the other afternoon, when her attention was equally divided between the other acquaintance and the directions for a cake. Upon returning home she undertook to write down the recipe for her mother, and the old lady was paralyzed when she read the following: Take two pounds of flour, three rows of plating down the front, the whites of two eggs cut bias, a pint of milk ruffled around the neck, half pound of currents with seven yards of bead trimming, graded lemon peel with Spanish lace flechu. Stir well and add a semi-fitting palot with visite sleeves, butter pan with Brazilian topaz necklace and garnish with icing and pastermenterie. Bake in moderately hot oven until the skirt is tucked from the waist down on either side and finish with large satin rosettes."

Her mother said she wouldn't eat such a cake, and she thought these new fangled ideas in cooking should be frowned down.

Chicken Hangs Self In a Fit of Grief

THE two-weeks old pet chicken of W. L. Shi, assistant in the city assessor's office, committed suicide last night by hanging herself.

The only reason assigned for the act is that she grieved over the accidental death by drowning of her twin sister, early in the day.

The tragedy was not discovered until this morning, when Shi went to his barnyard in the rear of his residence, 393 Clay street, and found the little chick hanging by its neck between the holes in the floor of its coop.

The sister of the suicide victim fell into a wash tub full of water in the morning. The coroner has not yet been notified, but it is more than likely that the verdict will be death by suicide.—Macon (Ga.) News.

Hailstones Picked Up A Week After Storm

LYRLY, Ga.—Four years ago this summer Lyerly was visited by the most destructive hailstorm ever experienced here. A path one mile wide and several miles long was struck by the storm and the leaves of the trees and cotton and corn were completely stripped off. Much of the timber was killed. Many houses in Lyerly were badly damaged by the hail. The ground was covered with hailstones as large as large-size hickory nuts. The stones remained on the ground in many places for more than a week.

Protest Made Against Silent Funeral Bells

THE time-honored custom of tolling the bell for a funeral service seems to have been neglected lately, thereby causing us that would like to go to a burial a great deal of inconvenience. If we get to go to all the We who live in town can learn of a burial by mere chance, and those who live in the country could easily put us on notice by having the bell tolled. Otherwise please do not criticize us too severely for non-attendance.—Chatsworth (Ga.) Times.

One Girl Born in Family in 66 Years

LYRLY, Ga.—Miss Frances Louise Stark, of this place, is the only girl born in the entire Stark family in sixty-six years, and the only grandchild on either Mr. or Mrs. Stark's side.

She is the great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Dover, Lyerly's oldest couple, who possess more kinspeople than any other two people in this section. They have more than one hundred and fifty descendants and relatives, the majority of whom live in Georgia.

Frances Louise Stark is named after her Great-Grandmother Stark. She is the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Stark, of Lyerly, and is their only child. Her mother before marriage was Miss Jessie Louise Townsend, of Atlanta.

Claims Wind Blew Cow's Horns Off

OAKHURST, La.—Mr. J. B. Hopson, of Oakhurst, La., in speaking to several friends this morning of yesterday's storm, said that he had suffered a little bad luck and knew how to sympathize with the good people of Frisars Point, "although," said Mr. Hopson, "my case is laughable. Yesterday after the storm had passed my yardman approached and said, 'boss, we done suffered some damage, too, one of de cow's horns has been knocked off.'"

"Soon the animal was brought forward and sure enough the horn was gone. The yardman thinks the wind blew off the horn and still sticks to his belief."—Natchez (Miss.) Democrat.

Lightning Strikes Tree; Nearly Kills a Man

W. A. HAMMONS was badly shocked by lightning one day last week. It struck a tree near his front door, and he was resting on a bed near the door and probably would have been killed had he been lying on his back, but fortunately he was lying on his side.—Wesson (Miss.) Enterprise.

Negro Charged With Looking Like Thief

ROME, Ga.—A warrant for an offense heretofore unknown in Georgia criminal law has been returned to Solicitor-General W. H. Ennis by Justice of the Peace Bramlett of Lindale. The warrant charges Sam Moseley, a negro, with "sitting on the front porch of W. F. Proudfoot's house, looking as though he might be a man who would steal." Solicitor Ennis states that this is his first experience with this charge, and that he is at a loss as to how to proceed.

Corn Is Thick as An African Jungle

LYRLY, Ga.—A correspondent from North Chickamauga to the Walker County (Ga.) Messenger says: "R. B. Bagwell is the champion corn grower in these sticks. He has four acres on Black mountain that are strictly fine. His neighbors say that it is so dense that a man has to have a light to see his way out at 12 o'clock noon. Fireflies have been seen in his corn at all hours of the day. Mr. Bagwell is up in the seventies and has done his own work."

Dick, Old City Horse, Cashes In

DEATH has knocked the props from under Plumbing Inspector Alexander in the way of traveling about the city inspecting plumbing work.

Remember Dick, the old white horse that has been stumbling over the streets so long? The old horse the Alexander family loved so well that he was fed on cake and strawberries, and now and then given a fat Rhode Island red pullet for his feed? Dick, the horse that once pulled some of the fire apparatus before autos came into use in the department, and who because of long service had been assigned to the scrap heap, but later given to the plumbing inspector to haul him around?

Well, he is dead. Died yesterday morning of old age, with not a scratch against him.

As long as the poor beast could stand on his legs he was willing to go. He was a familiar sight on the streets because of his halting gait. In his dumb way he wished for the rest that belongs to faithful servants, but had no kick coming if it was not given him.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

State's Oldest Banker Celebrates Anniversary

FARM boy, railroad machinist, student, banker.

This has been the career of H. T. Powell, of Macon, Ga., probably engaged in the banking business for a longer period than any other man in the state.

Recently, he celebrated his 49th anniversary as a banker in Macon, where he is now president of the Macon Savings bank.

As a boy he milked cows, churned, and did other farm work at his mother's home in East Macon. At 14 he was employed in the Macon and Western machine shops where he served a four-years' apprenticeship as a machinist.

He was given a place as an engineer, and for a few months ran between Macon and Atlanta.

At the age of 19 he decided he would be a banker and would go to New York to fit himself for a business career. In those days, to reach New York, one went first to Chattanooga, then to Nashville, to Louisville, to Pittsburg. The trip required six days.

As a passenger, officials of the Macon and Western gave Mr. Powell the following note:

"Mr. H. T. Powell, having completed his physical course in our shops, has decided to complete his literary course. Will you assist him by honoring him on your train?"

A conductor in New Jersey was the only man who refused to honor the pass.

Mr. Powell studied a year in New York, then returned to Macon, where he was employed 49 years ago, as collector in a bank owned by Isaac Scott, A. C. Butting, and A. B. Powell.

He soon became teller and held that position nine years. In 1875 he was appointed cashier. In 1902 he was elected president, a position he has since held.

Man Attacked by 'Gator; His Leg Is Badly Torn

A REAL, live alligator attacked a preacher, in Georgetown, S. C., the other day, says a dispatch to the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle. Mr. Marcus Nicholson, accompanied by his wife, was returning from his church late in the night. As they walked along the high road, they met what they thought was a dog. Without provocation the alligator attacked the preacher, seizing him by the foot and throwing him violently to the ground. In the struggle that ensued the alligator lost his hold on the foot and took a new hold on the leg at the knee. The wife with great coolness secured a large knife from the pocket of her struggling husband, and made war on the 'gator, and succeeded in killing it. The man was fearfully torn about the leg and badly beaten by the enraged reptile. The alligator was measured and found to be seven feet long. This is the first case heretofore of an alligator attacking anyone on dry land.

Boy Nearly Killed By Falling Tombstone

DALTON, Ga.—Pinned down by a heavy tombstone in Swamp Creek cemetery, this county, a little, two-year-old son of H. L. Nations narrowly escaped death. When found he was almost unconscious.

The child attempted to climb upon the tombstone, and, in doing so, pulled it over upon himself. At first it was thought his injuries were serious; but he rallied, and is now thought out of danger.

Hydroplanes Will Meet Incoming Ships

SAVANNAH, Ga.—Charles Wilkinson, who recently bought at auction the hydroplanes on Dutch Island at the shop of Captain Batson says he will put his purchases to unique use.

"I am going to have the hydroplanes completed," he said, "and put in service on the Savannah river to meet incoming steamers that may be in need of repairs. I can land a man on one of these ships from one of my hydroplanes while the visitor is still on the way in."

Rare Coins Are Owned at Tifton

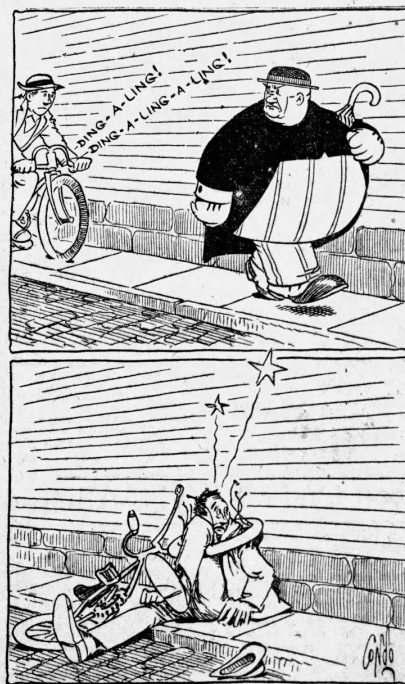

SPEAKING of rare coins, Mr. W. H. Norris shows us some unusual ones. A copper penny of the date of 1797 that is almost as big as a silver dollar. It is a little worn.

A gold piece about the size of a five-dollar gold piece of the date of 1790. This piece bears the head of King George III, as does the copper.

Mr. Norris also has two silver crowns of the date of 1820.—Tifton (La.) Gazette.

OUTBURSTS OF EVERETT TRUE

By Condo

By Bishop Warren A. Candier

It would be a blessed thing if the "war shock" could so shock us that we would cease putting our trust in mere knowledge as a saving power, and could thus bring us back to the recognition of the simple truth that "righteousness exalteth a nation," and that sin, however refined and enlightened, is a reproach to any people.

The nations, whose perishing history has recorded, all died by suicide.

They were themselves, not merely most ignorant, but never most enlightened by any of the great Chris-tianistic is ever pulled down, which they will be more intelligent avarice and it escapes destruction,

It will be saved by hands that are both pious and wise, having both the power and the moral character required for the work. The Christian culture is our hope, and the hope of mankind. It will worship God and work righteousness and peace on the earth, and this will no other sort of culture do.

And One on Wylie Alliston

Wylie as they passed his store, they stopped, and one inquired of him if he had any "tanglefoot." he didn't take time to answer them, but hurried to the back of the store and soon returned with two glassies of hard cider. When the ladies blushingly told him that wasn't tanglefoot. Wylie answered seriously that it made him "tangle-footed." all right.

terior decoration follows the fashion of some of the people of the South.
Among the types of homes in Atlanta are the southern and the New England colonial, the early English, Georgian Italian, English, French, and Russian.
How the design of the home here has changed!
The modern art became tiresome and lost its value.
The result is an absolute return to old fashions—the colonial, to the early English, to the time of the French and the Italian renaissance; even to Portugalian customs of architecture and decoration.
A greater effort is also being made to harmonize architecture and interior decoration. It was a long time ago when colonial, Adam, renaissance, or other period or feeling, they show the same harmony of design and furnishing.
The result is left to the reader to judge.

phase of the Elizabethan style. The result is a very fine example of a home from the old English homes of ancient origin.

The result is an absolute return to old fashions. The colors, the decorations, the English, to the time of the French and the Italian renaissance; even to Pompeian customs of architecture and decoration.

A greater effort is also being made to harmonize architecture and interior decoration. Always, the same decorative scheme. Adam, renaissance, or other period or feeling, they show the same way of choosing the colors and the decorations.

On the left at the top is the residence of Beaumont Davidson in Druid Hills. This is an excellent example of an early style of the new movement. The house is constructed of dark red brick and stucco and trimmed with oak half timber. The interior is decorated with tapestries from the old English homes of ancient origin.

On the left, below the Davidson house, is the residence of the Colonel. It is finished in a soft olive green enamel. In the panel a "Sisyphean" decoration is used, in tones of black, green, and mulberry. The rug is of an olive greenecolor ground with the ornaments and designs in the same tones and with decorations. The hangings at the window are of English silk.

On the right at the top is the entrance hall in the home of Mr. Adams. This spacious hall is wonderfully decorated with a tapestry of the Louis XVI period. Above the mahogany wainscoting the walls are settled in a rich old gold. The richly carved chairs are of the Louis XVI period. The French hand-tufted rugs are of Louis XVI design.

The picture, seen from the bottom, shows the sun parlor in the home of Edward H. Inman. The walls and mantle are finished in the same brick as the exterior.

and they destroyed themselves, not when they were most ignorant, but when they were most enlightened by a God-given conscience.

If our republic is ever pulled down, educated hands will do the work of destruction, and they will be moved by the most intelligent avarice and ambition. If it escapes destruction, it will be saved by hands that are both pious and wise, having both the power and the moral character required for the great task. In Christian culture is our hope, and the hope of mankind. It will worship God and work righteousness and peace on the earth, and this will no other sort of culture do.

Goodbye on Wylie Alliston

THE boys told a good one on our friend Wylie Alliston, one of South Morgan's best citizens. Some jokes are told on Wylie just to hear him laugh, but when they argue that there's no joke about this story—that it actually happened.

It was some time ago when Wylie conducted a small store on the Eatonton road. Two ladies of the neighborhood had driven to Madison and intended to get some tanglefoot, or fly paper, while there, but they argued until they had started home without it.

“Thing them flyin’!”

Wylie as they passed his store, they stopped, and one inquired of him if he had any “tanglefoot.” he didn’t take time to answer them, but hurried to the back of the store and soon returned with two glasses of hard cider. When the ladies blushing told him that wasn’t tanglefoot. Wylie answered seriously that made him “tangle-footed,” all right (respectfully referred to the Mitchell correspondent).—Madison (Ga.) A. M.
